FOREWORD

LIKE the magic carpet of the story-books, poetry can transport you from your fireside corner to lands afar, to the scene of adventure and romance, or to the open road of the countryside at the spring of the year. Before poetry can give you these delights it must be read with enjoyment: take your favourite poets and let them be your companions. If it is adventure you want, poetry will give you all you desire. Without knowing how it happened, you will soon be flying on that magic carpet to join the company of those who seek high adventure.

On your way you will discover that the poets are true adventurers whose minds leap beyond the bounds of earth and send us messages that words alone cannot express

All men are poets, but few can impart the feelings that beauty of every kind can awaken in their hearts. Listen in and attune your hearing to their messages and you will realize your own kinship with the poets.

Many poems printed here have come down to us from the past, some from times so remote that those who first sang them are unknown. This is part of the splendid heritage that is the birthright of all who speak English. When you read the modern poems in this book you will realize the continuity as well as the richness of our heritage. These poets, already deservedly famous, are with you in the quest of adventure.

STAGE II

THE JOY OF READING

O for a book and a shady nook,
Either in-doors or out;
With the green leaves whispering overhead,
Or the street cries all about;
Where I may read all at my ease,
Both of the new and old;
For a jolly good book whereon to look,
Is better to me than gold.

ANONYMOUS

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

OFF THE GROUND

Three jolly Farmers
Once bet a pound
Each dance the others would
Off the ground,
Out of their coats
They slipped right soon,
And neat and nicesome
Put each his shoon.
One—Two—Three!
And away they go,
Not too fast,
And not too slow;
Out from the elm-tree's
Noonday shadow,
Into the sun
And across the meadow,
Past the schoolroom,
With knees well bent,
Fingers a-flicking,
They dancing went,
Upsides and over,
And round and round,

They crossed click-clacking
 The Parish bound;
 By Tupman's meadow
 They did their mile,
 Tee-to-tum
 On a three-barred stile.
 Then straight through Whipham,
 Downhill to Week,
 Footing it lightsome,
 But not too quick,
 Up fields to Watchet,
 And on through Wye,
 Till seven fine churches
 They'd seen skip by—
 Seven fine churches,
 And five old mills,
 Farms in the valley,
 And sheep on the hills;
 Old Man's Acre
 And Dead Man's Pool
 All left behind,
 As they danced through Wool.
 And Wool gone by,
 Like tops that seem
 To spin in sleep
 They danced in dream:
 Withy—Wellover—
 Wassop—Wo—
 Like an old clock
 Their heels did go.
 A league and a league
 And a league they went,

And not one weary,
 And not one spent,
 And lo, and behold!
 Past Willow-cum-Leigh
 Stretched with its waters
 The great green sea.
 Says Farmer Bates,
 "I puffs and I blows.
 What's under the water,
 Why, no man knows!"
 Says Farmer Giles,
 "My mind comes weak,
 And a good man drowned
 Is far to seek."
 But Farmer Turvey,
 On twirling toes,
 Ups with his gaiters,
 And in he goes:
 Down where the mermaids
 Pluck and play
 On their twangling harp
 In a sea-green day;
 Down where the mermaids,
 Finned and fair,
 Sleek with their combs
 Their yellow hair. . . .
 Bates and Giles
 On the shingle sat,
 Gazing at Turvey's
 Floating hat.
 But never a ripple
 Nor bubble told

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

Where he was supping
Off plates of gold.
Never an echo
Rilled through the sea
Of the feasting and dancing
And minstrelsy.
They called—called—called:
Came no reply:
Nought but the ripples'
Sandy sigh.
Then glum and silent
They sat instead,
Vacantly brooding
On home and bed,
Till both together
Stood up and said:—
"Us knows not, dreams not,
Where you be,
Turvey, unless
In the deep blue sea;
But axcusing silver—
And it comes most willing—
Here's us two paying
Our forty shilling;
For it's sartin sure, Turvey,
Safe and sound,
You danced us square, Turvey,
Off the ground! "

WALTER DE LA MARE

THE WALRUS AND THE CARPENTER

The sun was shining on the sea,
 Shining with all his might:
 He did his very best to make
 The billows smooth and bright—
 And this was odd, because it was
 The middle of the night.

The moon was shining sulkily,
 Because she thought the sun
 Had got no business to be there
 After the day was done—
 "It's very rude of him," she said,
 "To come and spoil the fun."

The sea was wet as wet could be,
 The sands were dry as dry.
 You could not see a cloud, because
 No cloud was in the sky;
 No birds were flying overhead—
 There were no birds to fly.

The Walrus and the Carpenter
 Were walking close at hand;
 They wept like anything to see
 Such quantities of sand:
 "If this were only cleared away,"
 They said, "it would be grand!"

"If seven maids with seven mops
Swept it for half a year,
Do you suppose," the Walrus said,
"That they could get it clear?"
"I doubt it," said the Carpenter,
And shed a bitter tear.

"O Oysters, come and walk with us!"
The Walrus did beseech.
"A pleasant walk, a pleasant talk,
Along the briny beach:
We cannot do with more than four,
To give a hand to each."

The eldest Oyster looked at him,
But never a word he said:
The eldest Oyster winked his eye,
And shook his heavy head—
Meaning to say he did not choose
To leave the oyster-bed.

But four young Oysters hurried up,
All eager for the treat:
Their coats were brushed, their faces washed,
Their shoes were clean and neat—
And this was odd, because, you know,
They hadn't any feet.

Four other Oysters followed them,
And yet another four;
And thick and fast they came at last,
And more, and more, and more—
All hopping through the frothy waves,
And scrambling to the shore.

The Walrus and the Carpenter
 Walked on a mile or so,
 And then they rested on a rock
 Conveniently low:
 And all the little Oysters stood
 And waited in a row.

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
 "To talk of many things:
 Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—
 Of cabbages—and kings—
 And why the sea is boiling hot—
 And whether pigs have wings."

"But, wait a bit," the Oysters cried,
 "Before we have our chat;
 For some of us are out of breath,
 And all of us are fat!"
 "No hurry!" said the Carpenter.
 They thanked him much for that.

"A loaf of bread," the Walrus said,
 "Is what we chiefly need:
 Pepper and vinegar besides
 Are very good indeed—
 Now if you're ready, Oysters dear,
 We can begin to feed."

"But not on us!" the Oysters cried,
 Turning a little blue.
 "After such kindness, that would be
 A dismal thing to do!"
 "The night is fine," the Walrus said,
 "Do you admire the view?"

"It was so kind of you to come:
And you are very nice!"
The Carpenter said nothing but,
"Cut us another slice:
I wish you were not quite so deaf—
I've had to ask you twice!"

"It seems a shame," the Walrus said,
"To play them such a trick,
After we've brought them out so far,
And made them trot so quick!"
The Carpenter said nothing but,
"The butter's spread too thick."

"I weep for you," the Walrus said,
"I deeply sympathize."
With sobs and tears he sorted out
Those of the largest size,
Holding his pocket-handkerchief
Before his streaming eyes.

"O Oysters," said the Carpenter,
"You've had a pleasant run!
Shall we be trotting home again?"
But answer there was none—
And this was scarcely odd, because They'd eaten every one.

LEWIS CARROLL

"I am a linen-draper bold,
As all the world doth know,
And my good friend the calender¹
Will lend his horse to go."

Quoth Mrs. Gilpin—"That's well said;
And, for that wine is dear,
We will be furnished with our own,
Which is both bright and clear."

John Gilpin kissed his loving wife;
O'erjoyed was he to find
That, though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.

The morning came, the chaise was brought,
But yet was not allowed
To drive up to the door, lest all
Should say that she was proud.

So three doors off the chaise was stayed,
Where they did all get in;
Six precious souls, and all agog
To dash through thick and thin!

Smack went the whip, round went the wheels,
Were never folk so glad,
The stones did rattle underneath,
As if Cheapside were mad.

John Gilpin at his horse's side
Seized fast the flowing mane,
And up he got, in haste to ride,
But soon came down again;

For saddle-tree scarce reached had he,
His journey to begin,
When, turning round his head, he saw
Three customers come in.

So down he came; for loss of time,
Although it grieved him sore,
Yet loss of pence, full well he knew,
Would trouble him much more.

'Twas long before the customers
Were suited to their mind,
When Betty screaming came downstairs—
"The wine is left behind!"

"Good lack!" quoth he—"yet bring it me,
My leathern belt likewise,
In which I bear my trusty sword
When I do exercise."

Now mistress Gilpin (careful soul!)
Had two stone bottles found,
To hold the liquor that she loved,
And keep it safe and sound.

Each bottle had a curling ear,
Through which the belt he drew,
And hung a bottle on each side,
To make his balance true.

Then, over all, that he might be
Equipped from top to toe,
His long red cloak, well brushed and neat,
He manfully did throw.

"I am a linen-draper bold,

WILLIAM COWPER

For saddle-tree scarce reached had he,
His journey to begin,
When, turning round his head, he saw
Three customers come in.

So down he came; for loss of time,
Although it grieved him sore,
Yet loss of pence, full well he knew,
Would trouble him much more.

'Twas long before the customers
Were suited to their mind,
When Betty screaming came downstairs—
"The wine is left behind!"

"Good lack!" quoth he—"yet bring it me,
My leathern belt likewise,
In which I bear my trusty sword
When I do exercise."

Now mistress Gilpin (careful soul!)
Had two stone bottles found,
To hold the liquor that she loved,
And keep it safe and sound.

Each bottle had a curling ear,
Through which the belt he drew,
And hung a bottle on each side,
To make his balance true.

Then, over all, that he might be
Equipped from top to toe,
His long red cloak, well brushed and neat,
He manfully did throw.

Now see him mounted once again
Upon his nimble steed,
Full slowly pacing o'er the stones
With caution and good heed!

But, finding soon a smoother road
Beneath his well-shod feet,
The snorting beast began to trot,
Which galled him in his seat.

So, "Fair and softly," John he cried,
But John he cried in vain;
That trot became a gallop soon,
In spite of curb and rein.

So stooping down, as needs he must
Who cannot sit upright,
He grasped the mane with both his hands,
And eke with all his might.

His horse, who never in that sort
Had handled been before,
What thing upon his back had got
Did wonder more and more.

Away went Gilpin, neck or nought;
Away went hat and wig!—
He little dreamt, when he set out,
Of running such a rig!

The wind did blow, the cloak did fly
Like streamer long and gay,
Till, loop and button failing both,
At last it flew away.

Then might all people well discern
The bottles he had slung;
A bottle swinging at each side,
As hath been said or sung.

The dogs did bark, the children screamed,
Up flew the windows all;
And ev'ry soul cried out—" Well done! "
As loud as he could bawl.

Away went Gilpin—who but he?
His fame soon spread around—
" He carries weight! " " He rides a race! "
" 'Tis for a thousand pound! "

And still, as fast as he drew near,
'Twas wonderful to view
How in a trice the turnpike-men
Their gates wide open threw.

And now, as he went bowing down
His reeking head full low,
The bottles twain behind his back
Were shattered at a blow.

Down ran the wine into the road,
Most pitcous to be seen,
Which made his horse's flanks to smoke
As they had basted been.

But still he seemed to carry weight,
With leathern girdle braced;
For all might see the bottle-necks
Still dangling at his waist.

Thus all through merry Islington
 These gambols he did play,
 Until he came unto the Wash¹
 Of Edmonton so gay.

And there he threw the wash² about
 On both sides of the way,
 Just like unto a trundling mop,
 Or a wild goose at play.

At Edmonton his loving wife
 From the balcony spied
 Her tender husband, wond'ring much
 To see how he did ride.

"Stop, stop, John Gilpin!—Here's the house"—
 They all at once did cry;
 "The dinner waits, and we are tired."
 Said Gilpin—"So am I!"

But yet his horse was not a whit
 Inclined to tarry there;
 For why?—his owner had a house
 Full ten miles off, at Ware.

So like an arrow swift he flew,
 Shot by an archer strong;
 So did he fly—which brings me to
 The middle of my song.

Away went Gilpin, out of breath,
 And sore against his will,
 Till at his friend the calender's
 His horse at last stood still.

² Pools of water lying on the marshy ground.

WILLIAM COWPER

The calender, amazed to see
His neighbour in such trim,
Laid down his pipe, flew to the gate,
And thus accosted him:—

“What news? what news? your tidings tell
Tell me you must and shall—
Say why bare-headed you are come,
Or why you come at all?”

Now Gilpin had a pleasant wit,
And loved a timely joke;
And thus unto the calender
In merry guise he spoke:—

“I came because your horse would come;
And, if I well forebode,
My hat and wig will soon be here—
They are upon the road.”

The calender, right glad to find
His friend in merry pin,
Returned him not a single word,
But to the house went in;

Whence straight he came with hat and wig
A wig that flowed behind,
A hat not much the worse for wear,
Each comely in its kind.

He held them up, and, in his turn,
Thus showed his ready wit—
“My head is twice as big as yours,
They therefore needs must fit.

" But let me scrape the dirt away
That hangs upon your face;
And stop and eat, for well you may
Be in a hungry case."

Said John—" It is my wedding-day,
And all the world would stare,
If wife should dine at Edmonton
And I should dine at Ware!"

So, turning to his horse, he said—
" I am in haste to dine;
'Twas for your pleasure you came here,
You shall go back for mine."

Ah, luckless speech, and bootless boast!
For which he paid full dear;
For, while he spake, a braying ass
Did sing most loud and clear;

Whereat his horse did snort, as he
Had heard a lion roar,
And galloped off with all his might,
As he had done before.

Away went Gilpin, and away
Went Gilpin's hat and wig!
He lost them sooner than at first—
For why?—they were too big!

Now, mistress Gilpin, when she saw
Her husband posting down
Into the country far away,
She pulled out half a crown;

And thus unto the youth she said
That drove them to the Bell—
“This shall be yours when you bring back
My husband safe and well.”

The youth did ride, and soon did meet
John coming back amain;
Whom in a trice he tried to stop
By catching at his rein;

But, not performing what he meant,
And gladly would have done,
The frightened steed he frightened more,
And made him faster run.

Away went Gilpin, and away
Went post-boy at his heels¹—
The post-boy's horse nigh glad to miss
The lumb'ring of the wheels.

Six gentlemen upon the road,
Thus seeing Gilpin fly,
With post-boy scamp'ring in the rear,
They raised the hue and cry:

“Stop thief! stop thief!—a highwayman!”
Not one of them was mute;
And all and each that passed that way
Did join in the pursuit.

And now the turnpike gates again
Flew open in short space;
The toll-men thinking, as befo:
That Gilpin rode a race.

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

And so he did—and won it too!—
For he got first to town;
Nor stopped till where he had got up
He did again get down.

Now let us sing—Long live the king,
And Gilpin long live he;
And, when he next doth ride abroad,
May I be there to see!

WILLIAM COWPER

SADDLE TO RAGS

This story I'm going to sing,
I hope it will give you content,
Concerning a silly¹ old man
That was going to pay his rent.

As he was a-riding along,
Along all on the highway,
A gentleman-thief overtook him,
And thus unto him he did say:

"O well overtaken, old man,
O well overtaken," said he:

"Thank you kindly, sir," says the old man,
"If you be for my company."

"How far are you going this way?"
It made the old man to smile;

"To tell you the truth, kind sir,
I'm just a-going twa mile.

¹ Defenceless.

"I am but a silly old man,
 Who farms a piece of ground;
 My half-year rent, kind sir,
 Just comes to forty pound.

"But my landlord's not been at home—
 I've not seen him twelve month or more;
 It makes my rent to be large,
 I've just to pay him fourscore."

"You should not have told anybody,
 For thieves they are ganging many;
 If they were to light upon you
 They would rob you of every penny."

"O! never mind," says the old man,
 "Thieves I fear on no side;
 My money is safe in my bags,
 In the saddle on which I ride."

As they were a-riding along,
 And riding a-down a ghyll,¹
 The thief pulled out a pistol,
 And bade the old man stand still.

The old man was crafty and false,
 As in this world are many;
 He flung his old saddle o'er 't hedge,
 And said, "Fetch it, if thou'lt have any."

The thief got off his horse,
 With courage stout and bold,
 To search this old man's bags,
 And gave him his horse to hold.

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

The old man put foot in stirrup,
And he got on astride;
He set the thief's horse in a gallop—
You need not bid th' old man ride!

"O stay! O stay!" says the thief,
"And thou half my share shalt have."
"Nay, marry, not I," quoth the old man,
"For once I've bitten a knave!"

This thief he was not content,
He thought there must be bags,
So he up with his rusty sword,
And chopped the old saddle to rags.

The old man galloped and rode,
Until he was almost spent,
Till he came to his landlord's house,
And he paid him his whole year's rent.

He opened this rogue's portmantle,
It was glorious for to behold;
There was five hundred pound in money,
And other five hundred in gold.

JOHN BARLEYCORN

There was three kings into the East,
Three kings both great and high,
And they hac sworn a solemn oath,
John Barleycorn should die.

ANONYMOUS

They took a plough and ploughed him down,
Put clods upon his head,
And they hae sworn a solemn oath,
John Barleycorn was dead.

But the cheerful spring came kindly on,
And showers began to fall;
John Barleycorn got up again,
And sore surprised them all.

The sultry suns of summer came,
And he grew thick and strong,
His head well armed wi' pointed spears,
That no one should him wrong.

The sober autumn entered mild,
When he grew wan and pale;
His bending joints and drooping head
Showed he began to fail.

His colour sickened more and more,
He faded into age;
And then his enemies began
To show their deadly rage.

They've ta'en a weapon long and sharp,
And cut him by the knee;
And tied him fast upon the cart,
Like a rogue for forgerie.

They laid him down upon his back,
And cudgelled him full sore;
They hung him up before the storm,
And turned him o'er and o'er.

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

They fillèd up a darksome pit
With water to the brim,
They heavèd in John Barleycorn,
There let him sink or swim.

They laid him out upon the floor,
To work him further woe,
And still, as signs of life appeared,
They tossed him to and fro.

They wasted, o'er a scorching flame,
The marrow of his bones;
But a miller used him worst of all,
For he crushed him 'tween two stones.

And they hae ta'en his very heart's blood,
And drank it round and round;
And still the more and more they drank,
Their joy did more abound.

John Barleycorn was a hero bold,
Of noble enterprise;
For if you do but taste his blood,
'Twill make your courage rise.

Then let us toast John Barleycorn,
Each man a glass in hand;
And may his great posterity
Ne'er fail in old Scotland!

GET UP AND BAR THE DOOR

It fell about the Martinmas time,
 And a gay time it was then,
 When our goodwife got puddings to make,
 And she's boil'd them in the pan.

The wind sae cauld blew south and north,
 And blew into the floor;
 Quoth our goodman to our goodwife,
 "Gae out and bar the door."

"My hand is in my hussyfskep,¹
 Goodman, as ye may see;
 An it shou'd nae be barr'd this hundred year,
 It's no be barr'd for me."

They made a paction 'tween them twa,
 They made it firm and sure,
 That the first word whae'er shou'd speak
 Shou'd rise and bar the door.

Then by there came twa gentlemen,
 At twelve o'clock at night,
 And they cou'd neither see house nor hall,
 Nor coal nor candle-light.

¹ Hussyfskep. A bushel basket containing grain, malt, or sugar.

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

"Now whether is this a rich man's house,
Or whether it is a poor?"
But ne'er a word wad ane o' them speak,
For barring of the door.

At first they ate the white puddings,
And then they ate the black;
Though muckle thought the goodwife to hersel',
Yet ne'er a word she spake.

Then said the ane unto the other,
"Here, man, tak ye my knife;
Do ye tak off the auld man's beard,
And I'll kiss the goodwife."—

"But there's nae water in the house,
And what shall we do than?"—
"What ails ye at the pudding-broo,
That boils into the pan?"

O up and started our goodman,
An angry man was he:
"Will ye kiss my wife before my een,
And sca'd me wi' pudding-bree?"

Then up and started our goodwife,
Gied three skips on the floor:
"Goodman, you've spoken the foremost word!
Get up and bar the door."

THE SONG OF THE CYCLOPS

Brave iron, brave hammer, from your sound
The art of music has her ground;
On the anvil thou keep'st time,
Thy knick-a-knock is a smith's best chime.
Yet thwick-a-thwack, thwick, thwack-a-thwack,
thwack,
Make our brawny sinews crack :
Then pit-a-pat, pat, pit-a-pat, pat,
Till thickest bars be beaten flat.

We shoe the horses of the sun,
Harness the dragons of the moon;
Forge Cupid's quiver, bow, and arrows,
And our dame's coach that's drawn with sparrows
Till thwick-a-thwack, etc.

Jove's roaring cannons and his rammers
We beat out with our Lemnian hammers;
Mars his gauntlet, helm, and spear,
And Gorgon shield are all made here.
Till thwick-a-thwack, etc.

The grate which, shut, the day outbars,
Those golden studs, which nail the stars,
The globe's case and the axle-tree,
Who can hammer these but we?
Till thwick-a-thwack, etc.

A warming-pan to heat earth's bed,
 Lying i' the frozen zone half-dead;
 Hob-nails to serve the man i' the moon,
 And sparrowbills to clout Pan's shoon
 Whose work but ours?
 Till thwick-a-thwack, etc.

Venus' kettles, pots, and pans
 We make, or else she brawls and bans;
 Tongs, shovels, and irons have their places,
 Else she scratches all our faces.
 Till thwick-a-thwack, thwick, thwack-a-thwack,
 thwack,
 Make our brawny sinews crack:
 Then pit-a-pat, pat, pit-a-pat, pat,
 Till thickest bars be beaten flat.

THE HEIGHT OF THE RIDICULOUS

I wrote some lines upon a time
In wondrous merry mood,
And thought, as usual, men would say
They were exceeding good.

They were so queer, so very queer,
I laughed as I should die;
Albeit, in the general way
A sober man am I.

A ROUND OF MERRIMENT

I called my servant, and he came—(How kind it was of him
To mind a slender man like me,
He of the mighty limb!)

He took the paper, and I watched
And saw him peep within;
At the first line he read, his face
Was all upon the grin.

He read the next,—the grin grew broad
And shot from ear to ear;
He read the third,—a chuckling noise
I now began to hear.

The fourth—he burst into a roar;
The fifth—his waistband split;
The sixth—he burst five buttons off,
And tumbled in a fit.

Ten days and nights, with sleepless eye
I watched that wretched man;
And since, I never dare to write
As funny as I can.

MRS. REECE LAUGHS

From small beginnings, things of éasy girth,
To formidable redundancies of mirth.
Clusters of subterranean chuckles rise
And presently the circles of her eyes
Close into slits, and all the woman heaves
As a great elm with all its mounds of leaves
Wallows before the storm. From hidden sources
A mustering of blind volcanic forces
Takes her and shakes her till she sobs and gapes.
Then all that load of bottled mirth escapes
In one wild crow, a lifting of huge hands,
And creaking stays, and visage that expands
In scarlet ridge and furrow. Thence collapse,
A hanging head, a feeble hand that flaps
An apron-end to stir an air and waft
A steaming face. And Mrs. Reece has laughed.

ADVENTURE AND ROMANCE

GREEN BROOM

There was an old man lived out in the wood,
His trade was a-cutting of Broom, green Broom;
He had but one son without thrift, without good,
Who lay in his bed till 'twas noon, bright noon.

The old man awoke, one morning and spoke,
He swore he would fire the room, that room,
If his John would not rise and open his eyes,
And away to the wood to cut Broom, green Broom.

So Johnny arose, and he slipped on his clothes,
And away to the wood to cut Broom, green Broom,
He sharpened his knives, for once he contrives
To cut a great bundle of Broom, green Broom.

When Johnny passed under a lady's fine house,
Passed under a lady's fine room, fine room,
She called to her maid, "Go fetch me," she said,
"Go fetch me the boy that sells Broom, green Broom."

When Johnny came in to the lady's fine house,
And stood in the lady's fine room, fine room;

Young Johnny," she said, "will you give up your trade,
And marry a lady in bloom, full bloom? "

Johnny gave his consent, and to church they both went.
And he wedded the lady in bloom, full bloom.
At 'market and fair, all folks do declare,
There is none like the Boy that sold Broom, green
Broom.

THE WRAGGLE TAGGLE GIPSIES

There were three gipsies a-come to my door,
And downstairs ran this a-lady, O!
One sang high, and another sang low,
And the other sang, Bonny, bonny Biscay, O!

Then she pulled off her silk-finished gown
And put on hose of leather, O!
The ragged, ragged rags about our door—
She's gone with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O!

It was late last night, when my lord came home.
Enquiring for his a-lady, O!
The servants said, on every hand:
" She's gone with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O! "

" O saddle to me my milk-white steed.
Go and fetch me my pony, O!
That I may ride and seek my bride,
Who is gone with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O! "

O he rode high and he rode low,
 He rode through woods and copses too,
 Until he came to an open field,
 And there he espied his a-lady, O!

" What makes you leave your house and land?
 What makes you leave your money, O?
 What makes you leave your new-wedded lord;
 To go with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O? "

" What care I for my house and my land?
 What care I for my money, O?
 What care I for my new-wedded lord?
 I'm off with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O! "

" Last night you slept on a goose-feather bed,
 With the sheet turned down so bravely, O!
 And to-night you'll sleep in a cold open field,
 Along with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O! "

" What care I for a goose-feather bed,
 With the sheet turned down so bravely, O?
 For to-night I shall sleep in a cold open field,
 Along with the wraggle taggle gipsies, O! "

SIR PATRICK SPENS

I. The Sailing

The king sits in Dunfermline town
 Drinking the bluid-red wine;
 " O whare will I get a skeely skipper
 To sail this new ship o' mine? "

O up and spake an eldern knight,
 Sat at the king's right knee;
 "Sir Patrick Spens is the best sailor
 That ever sail'd the sea."

Our king has written a braid letter,
 And seal'd it with his hand,
 And sent it to Sir Patrick Spens,
 Was walking on the strand.

"To Noroway, to Noroway,
 To Noroway o'er the faem;
 The king's daughter o' Noroway,
 'Tis thou maun bring her hame."

The first word that Sir Patrick read
 So loud, loud laugh'd he;
 The neist word that Sir Patrick read
 The tear blinded his e'e.

"O wha is this has done this deed
 And tauld the king o' me,
 To send us out, at this time o' year,
 To sail upon the sea?"

"Be it wind, be it weet, be it hail, be it sleet,
 Our ship must sail the faem;
 The king's daughter o' Noroway,
 'Tis we must fetch her hame."

They hoysed their sails on Monenday morn
 Wi' a' the speed they may;
 They hac landed in Noroway
 Upon a Wodensday.

II. The Return

"Mak ready, mak ready, my merry men a'!
Our gude ship sails the morn."

"Now ever alack, my master dear,
I fear a deadly storm."

"I saw the new moon late yestreen
Wi' the auld moon in her arm;
And if we gang to sea, master,
I fear we'll come to harm."

They hadna sail'd a league, a league,
A league, but barely three,
When the lift¹ grew dark, and the wind blew loud,
And gurly grew the sea.

The ankers brak, and the topmast lap,
It was sic a deadly storm:
The waves cam owre the broken ship
Till a' her sides were torn.

"Go fetch a web o' the silken claith,
Another o' the twine,
And wap them into our ship's side,
' And let na the sea come in."

They fetch'd a web o' the silken claith,
Another o' the twine,
And they wapp'd them round that gude ship's side,
But still the sea came in.

O laith, laith were our gude Scots lords
 To wet their cork-heel'd shoon;
 But lang or a' the play was play'd
 They wat their hats aboon.

And mony was the feather bed
 That flatter'd¹ on the faem;
 And mony was the gude lord's son
 That never mair cam hame.

O lang, lang may the ladies sit,
 Wi' their fans into their hand,
 Before they see Sir Patrick Spens
 Come sailing to the strand!

And lang, lang may the maidens sit
 Wi' their gowd kames in their hair
 A-waiting for their ain dear loves!
 For them they'll see nae mair.

Half owre, half owre to Aberdour
 'Tis fifty fathom deep;
 And there lies gude Sir Patrick Spens
 Wi' the Scots lords at his feet!

KING JOHN AND THE ABBOT OF CANTERBURY

An ancient story I'll tell you anon
 Of a notable prince that was called King John;
 And he ruled England with main and with might,
 For he did great wrong and maintained little right.

¹ Floated.

And I'll tell you a story, a story so merry,
Concerning the Abbot of Canterbury:
How for his house-keeping, and high renown
They rode post for him to fair London town.

An hundred men, the king did hear say,
The abbot kept in his house every day:
And fifty gold chains, without any doubt,
In velvet coats waited the abbot about.

"How now, father abbot, I hear it of thee,
Thou keepest a far better house than me,
And, for thy house-keeping and high renown,
I fear thou work'st treason against my crown."

"My liege," quo' the abbot, "I would it were known
I never spend nothing but what is my own:
And I trust your grace will do me no harm
For spending of my own treasured sum."

"Yes, yes, father abbot, thy fault it is high,
And now for the same thou needest must die:
For except thou canst answer me questions three,
Thy head shall be smitten from thy body."

"And first," quo' the king, "when I'm in this land,
With my crown of gold so fair on my head,
Among all my liegemen so noble of birth,
Thou must tell me to one penny what I am worth."

"Secondly, tell me, without any doubt,
How soon I may ride the whole world about,
And at the third question thou must not shrink,
But tell me here truly what I do think."

"You must rise with the sun, and ride with the same,
 Until the next morning he riseth again;
 And then your grace need not make any doubt,
 But in twenty-four hours you'll ride it about."

The king he laughed and swore by St. John:

"I did not think I could do it so soon!

—Now from the third question thou must not shrink,
 But tell me here truly what I do think."

"Yea, that shall I do, and make your grace merry:

You think I'm the abbot of Canterbury;

But I'm his poor shepherd, as plain you may see,

That am come to beg pardon for him and for me."

The king he laughed, and swore by the mass,

"I'll make thee lord abbot this day in his place! "

"Now nay, my liege, be not in such speed,

For alack! I can neither write nor read."

"Four nobles' a week then I will give thee,

For this merry jest thou hast shown unto me;

And tell the good abbot, when thou comest home,

Thou hast brought him a pardon from good King
 John."

ROBIN HOOD AND ALAN A DALE

Come listen to me, you gallants so free,

All you that love mirth for to hear,

And I will you tell of a bold outlâw,

That lived in Nottinghamshire.

An anachronism. A noble was a gold coin worth 6s. 8d. (or ). first minted by Edward III.

ANONIMOUS

As Robin Hood in the forest stood
All under the green-wood tree
There was he ware of a brave young man
As fine as fine might be.

The youngster was clothed in scarlet red
In scarlet fine and gay,
And he did frisk it over the plain,
And chanted a roundelay.

As Robin Hood next morning stood,
Amongst the leaves so gay,
There did he espy the same young man
Come drooping along the way.

The scarlet he wore the day before,
It was clean cast away,
And every step he fetched a sigh,
" Alack and a well a day! "

Then stepped forth brave Little John,
And Much the miller's son,
Which made the young man bend his bow,
When as he saw them come.

" Stand off, stand off! " the young man said,
" What is your will with me? "—
" You must come before our master straight,
Under yon green-wood tree."

And when he came bold Robin before,
Robin asked him courteously,
" O hast thou any money to spare,
For my merry men and me? "

"I have no money," the young man said,
 "But five shillings and a ring;
 And that I have kept this seven long years,
 To have it at my wedding.

"Yesterday I should have married a maid,
 But she is now from me ta'en,
 And chosen to be an old knight's delight,
 Whereby my poor heart is slain."

"What is thy name?" then said Robin Hood,
 "Come tell me, without any fail."—
 "By the faith of my body," then said the young man,
 "My name it is Alan a Dale."

"What wilt thou give me," said Robin Hood,
 "In ready gold or fee,
 To help thee to thy true-love again,
 And deliver her unto thee?"

"I have no money," then quoth the young man,
 "No ready gold nor fee,
 But I will swear upon a book
 Thy true servant for to be."—

"But how many miles to thy true-love?
 Come tell me without any guile."—
 "By the faith of my body," then said the young man,
 "It is but five little mile."

Then Robin he hasted over the plain,
 He did neither stint nor lin,¹
 Until he came unto the church
 Where Alan should keep his wedding.

"What dost thou do here?" the Bishop he said,

"I prithee now tell to me."

"I am a bold harper," quoth Robin Hood,
 "And the best in the north country."

"O welcome, O welcome!" the Bishop he said,
 "That music best pleaseth me."—

"You shall have no music," quoth Robin Hood,
 "Till the bride and the bridegroom I see."

With that came in a wealthy knight,
 Which was both grave and old,
 And after him a finikin² lass,
 Did shine like glistering gold.

"This is no fit match," quoth bold Robin Hood,

"That you do seem to make here;
 For since we are come unto the church,
 The bride she shall choose her own dear."

Then Robin Hood put his horn to his mouth,
 And blew blasts two or three;
 When four and twenty bowmen bold
 Came leaping over the lee.

And when they came into the churchyard,
 Marching all on a row,

² Dainty.

The first man was Alan a Dale,
To give bold Robin his bow.

"This is thy true-love," Robin he said,
"Young Alan, as I hear say;
And you shall be married at this same time,
Before we depart away."

"That shall not be," the Bishop he said,
"For thy word it shall not stand;
They shall be three times asked in the church,
As the law is of our land."

Robin Hood pull'd off the Bishop's coat,
And put it upon Little John;
"By the faith of my body," then Robin said,
"The cloth doth make thee a man."

When Little John went into the choir,
The people began for to laugh;
He asked them seven times in the church,
Lest three should not be enough.

"Who gives me this maid?" then said Little John.

Quoth Robin, "That do I!
And he that doth take her from Alan a Dale
Full dearly he shall her buy."

And thus having ended this merry wedding,
The bride looked as fresh as a queen,
And so they returned to the merry greenwood,

Amongst the leaves so green.

BRUCE'S ADDRESS BEFORE BANNOCKBURN

Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled,
 Scots, wham Bruce has aften led;
 Welcome to your gory bed,
 Or to victorie!

Now's the day, and now's the hour;
 See the front o' battle lour;
 See approach proud Edward's power—
 Chains and slavery!

Wha will be a traitor knave?
 Wha can fill a coward's grave?
 Wha sae base as be a slave?
 Let him turn and flee!

Wha for Scotland's King and law
 Freedom's sword will strongly draw,
 Freeman stand, or freeman fa',
 Let him follow me!

By oppression's woes and pains!
 By your sons in servile chains!
 We will drain our dearest veins,
 But they shall be free!

Lay the proud usurpers low!
 Tyrants fall in every foe!
 Liberty's in every blow!
 Let us do, or die!

AGINCOURT

Fair stood the wind for France,
 When we our sails advance,
 Nor now to prove our chance
 Longer will tarry;
 But putting to the main,
 At Kaux, the mouth of Seine,
 With all his martial train,
 Landed King Harry.

And taking many a fort,
 Furnish'd in warlike sort,
 Marcheth towards Agincourt
 In happy hour;
 Skirmishing day by day
 With those that stopp'd his way,
 Where the French general lay
 With all his power.

Which in his height of pride,
 King Henry to deride,
 His ransom to provide
 To the king sending;
 Which he neglects the while,
 As from a nation vile,
 Yet with an angry smile
 Their fall portending.

And turning to his men,
 Quoth our brave Henry then,
 " Though they to one be ten,
 Be not amazèd:

Yet have we well begun
 Battles so bravely won
 Have ever to the sun

"And for myself," quoth he,
 "This my full rest shall be.
 England ne'er mourn for me
 Nor more esteem me:
 Victor I will remain,
 Or on this earth lie slain,
 Never shall she sustain
 Loss to redeem me.

"Poitiers and Cressy tell
 When most their pride did swell
 Under our swords they fell:
 No less our skill is
 Than when our grandsire great
 Claiming the regal seat,
 By many a warlike feat
 Lopp'd the French Estet."

The Duke of York so dread^d
 The eager vaward¹ led;
 With the main Henry speed^d
 Amongst his henchmen

 A braver man not there,
 Heavens! how hot they were
 On the false Frenchmen!

ADVENTURE AND ROMANCE

They now to fight are gone;
Armour on armour shone,
Drum now to drum did groan;
To hear was wonder;
That with the cries they make
The very earth did shake;
Trumpet to trumpet spake,
Thunder to thunder.

Well it thine age became,
O noble Erpingham,
Which didst the signal aim
To our hid forces;
When from a meadow by,
Like a storm suddenly,
The English archery
Stuck the French horses.

With Spanish yew so strong,
Arrows a cloth-yard long,
That like to serpents stung.
Piercing the weather;
None from his fellow starts,
But playing manly parts,
And like true English hearts,
Stuck close together.

When down their bows they threw,
And forth their bilboes drew,
And on the French they flew;
Not one was tardy;

*Arms were from shoulders sent,
Scalps to the teeth were rent,
Down the French peasants went,
Our men were hardy.*

*This while our noble king,
His broad sword brandishing,
Down the French host did ding,¹
As to o'erwhelm it;
And many a deep-wound lent,
His arms with blood besprent,
And many a cruel dent

*Gloucester, that duke so good,
Next of the royal blood,
For famous England stood,
With his brave brother,
Clarence, in steel so bright,
Though but a maiden knight,
Yet in that furious fight
Scarce such another.*

*Warwick in blood did wade,
Oxford the foe invade,
And cruel slaughter made,
Still as they ran up;
Suffolk his axe did ply.
Beaumont and Willoughby
Bare² them right doughtily.
Ferrers and Fanhope.*

Upon Saint Crispin's day
 Fought was this noble fray,
 Which fame did not delay
 To England to carry:
 O when shall Englishmen
 With such acts fill a pen,
 Or England breed again
 Such a King Harry!

THOMAS RYMER

True Thomas lay o'er yond grassy bank,
 And he beheld a ladie gay.
 A ladie that was brisk and bold,
 Come riding o'er the fernie brae.

Her skirt was of the grass-green silk,
 Her mantel of the velvet fine,
 At ilka tett¹ of her horse's mane
 Hung fifty silver bells and nine.

True Thomas he took off his hat,
 And bowed him low down till his knee:
 "All hail, thou mighty Queen of Heaven!
 For your peer on earth I never did see."

"O no, O no, True Thomas," she says,
 "That name does not belong to me;
 I am but the queen of fair Elfland,
 And I'm come here for to visit thee.

"But ye maun go wi' me now, Thomas,
 True Thomas, ye maun go wi' me,
 For ye maun serve me seven years,
 Thro' weel or wae, as may chance to be.

"Then harp and carp,² Thomas," she said,
 "Then harp and carp alang wi' me;
 But it will be seven years and a day
 Till ye win back to yere ain countrie."

She turned about her milk-white steed,
 And took True Thomas up behind,
 And aye whene'er her bridle rang,
 The steed flew swifter than the wind.

For forty days and forty nights
 He wade thro' red blude to the kneec,
 And he saw neither sun nor moon,
 But heard the roaring of the sea.

² Converse. Chaucer applies this word to the merry talk of the Wife of Bath.

" But Thomas, ye maun hold your tongue,
 Whatever you may hear or see,
 For gin ae word you should chance to speak,
 You will ne'er get back to your ain

He has gotten a coat of the even cloth,
 And a pair of shoes of velvet green,
 And till seven years were past and gone
 True Thomas on earth was never seen.

BINNORIE

There were twa sisters sat in a bour;
Binnorie, O Binnorie!
There cam a knight to be their wooer,
By the bonnie mill-dams o' Binnorie.
He courted the eldest with glove and ring,
But he lo'ed the youngest abune a' thing.
The eldest she was vexèd sair,
And sair envied her sister fair.
Upon a morning fair and clear,
She cried upon her sister dear:
"O sister, sister, tak my hand,
And we'll see our father's ships to land."
She's ta'en her by the lily hand,
And led her down to the river-strand.
The youngest stood upon a stane,
The eldest cam and pushed her in.

"O sister, sister, reach your hand!
And ye shall be heir o' half my land:

And sweet William shall be your love."

It twin'd me o' my warldis make.¹

"Your cherry cheeks and your yellow hair

Sometimes she sank, sometimes she swam,
Until she cam to the miller's dam.

Out then cam the miller's son,
And saw the fair maid soummin' in.

"O father, father, draw your dam!
There's either a mermaid or a milk-white swan."

*The miller hasted and drew his dam,
And there he found a drowned woman.*

You couldna see her middle sma',
Her gowden girdle was sae braw.

You couldna see her lily feet,
Her gowden fringes were sae deep.

You couldna see her yellow hair
For the strings o' pearls was twisted there.

He's made a harp of her breast-bane,
Whose sound would melt a heart of stane.

He's ta'en three locks o' her yellow hair,
And wi' them strung his harp sae rare.

He went into her father's hall,
And there was the court assembled all.

He laid his harp upon a stane,

HOW THEY BROUGHT THE GOOD NEWS FROM GHENT TO AIX

I

I sprang to the stirrup, and Joris, and he;
I galloped, Dirck galloped, we galloped all three;
"Good speed!" cried the watch, as the gate-bolts undrew;
"Speed!" echoed the wall to us galloping through;
Behind shut the postern, the lights sank to rest,
And into the midnight we galloped abreast.

II

Not a word to each other; we kept the great pace
Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our place;
I turned in my saddle and made its girths tight,
Then shortened each stirrup, and set the pique right,
Rebuckled the check-strap, chained slacker the bit,
Nor galloped less steadily Roland a whit.

III

'Twas moonset at starting; but while we drew near Lokeren, the cocks crew and twilight dawned clear;
At Boom, a great yellow star came out to see;
At Düsseldorf, 'twas morning as plain as could be;
And from Mecheln church-steeple we heard the hal chime,
So Joris broke silence with, "Yet there is time!"

IV

At Aerschot, up leaped of a sudden the sun,
 And against him the cattle stood black every one,
 To stare thro' the mist at us galloping past,
 And I saw my stout galloper Roland at last,
 With resolute shoulders, each butting away
 The haze, as some bluff river headland its spray.

V

And his low head and crest, just one sharp ear bent back
 For my voice, and the other pricked out on his track;
 And one eye's black intelligence,—ever that glance
 O'er its white edge at me, his own master, askancel
 And the thick heavy spume-flakes where eye and anon
 His fierce lips shook upwards in galloping on.

VI

By Hasselt, Dirck groaned; and, cried Joris, "Stay spur!
 Your Roos galloped bravely, the fault's not in her,
 We'll remember at Aix"—for one heard the quick wheeze
 Of her chest, saw the stretched neck and staggering knees,
 And sunk tail, and horrible heave of the flank,
 As down on her haunches she shuddered and sank.

VII

So we were left galloping, Joris and I,
 Past Looz and pass Tongres, no cloud in the sky;

the broad sun above laughed a pitiless laugh, beneath our feet broke the brittle bright stubble like chaff;
 till over by Dalhem a dome-spire sprang white,
 and "Gallop," gasped Joris, "for Aix is in sight!"

viii

"How they'll greet us!"—and all in a moment his roan
 Rolled neck and croup over, lay dead as a stone;
 And there was my Roland to bear the whole weight
 Of the news which alone could save Aix from her fate,
 With his nostrils like pits full of blood to the brim,
 And with circles of red for his eye-sockets' rim.

ix

Then I cast loose my buffcoat, each holster let fall,
 Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt and all,
 Stood up in the stirrup, leaned, patted his ear,
 Called my Roland his pet-name, my horse without peer Clapped my hands, laughed and sang, any noise, but or good,
 Till at length into Aix Roland galloped and stood.

x

And all I remember is—friends flocking round
 As I sat with his head 'twixt my knees on the ground
 And no voice but was praising this Roland of mine
 As I poured down his throat our last measure of wine
 Which (the burgesses voted by common consent
 Was no more than his due who brought good from Ghent.

1688

A good sword and a trusty hand!

A merry heart and true!

King James's men shall understand

What Cornish lads can do.

And have they fixed the where and when?

And shall Trelawny die?

Here's twenty thousand Cornish men

Will know the reason why!

Out spake their captain brave and bold,

A merry wight was he:

"If London Tower were Michael's hold,

We'll set Trelawny free!

"We'll cross the Tamar, land to land,

The Severn is no stay,—

With 'one and all,'¹ and hand in hand,

And who shall bid us nay?

"And when we come to London Wall,

A pleasant sight to view,

Come forth! Come forth, ye cowards all,

Here's men as good as you!

Trelawny he may die;—

But here's twenty thousand Cornish bold

Will know the reason why! "

ON THE HIGH SEAS

THE SALCOMBE SEAMAN'S FLAUNT TO THE PROUD PIRATE

A lofty ship from Salcombe came,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
She had golden trucks that shone like flame,
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

"Masthead, masthead," the captain's hail,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
"Look out and round; d'ye see a sail?"
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

"There's a ship that looms like Beachy Head,"
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
"Her banner aloft it blows out red,"
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

"Oh, ship ahoy, and where do you steer?"
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we,
"Are you man-of-war, or privateer?"
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

"I am neither one of the two," said she,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we,
"I'm a pirate looking for my fee,"
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

ON THE HIGH SEAS

"I'm a jolly pirate, out for gold:"
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
"I will rummage through your after hold,"
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

The grumbling guns they flashed and roared,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
Till the pirate's masts went overboard,
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

They fired shot till the pirate's deck,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
Was blood and spars and broken wreck,
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

"O do not haul the red flag down,"
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
"O keep all fast until we drown,"
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

They called for cans of wine, and drank,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
They sang their songs until she sank,
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

Now let us brew good cans of flip,¹
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
And drink a bowl to the Salcombe ship,
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

And drink a bowl to the land of fame,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
Who put the pirate ship to shame,
On the bonny coasts of Barbary.

Unhappy folks on shore now.

" Foolhardy chaps as live in towns,
What danger they are all in,
And now lie quaking in their beds,
For fear the roof should fall in!

And wishes, I've a notion,
For our good luck in such a storm
To be upon the ocean!

" And as for them that's out all day
On business from their houses,
And late at night returning home
To cheer their babes and spouses;
While you and I, Bill, on the deck
Are comfortably lying,
My eyes! what tiles and chimney-pots

ere's a surf breaks on Los Muertos, and it never stops to roar,
 and it's there we came to anchor, and it's there we went ashore,
 here the blue lagoon is silent amid snags of rotting
 trees,
 dropping like the clothes of corpses cast up by the seas.
 We anchored at Los Muertos when the dipping sun was red,
 We left her half-a-mile to sea, to west of Nigger Head;
 and before the mist was on the Cay, before the day was done,
 We were all ashore on Muertos with the gold that we had won.
 We bore it through the marshes in a half-score battered chests,
 Sinking, in the sucking quagmires, to the sunburn on our breasts,
 Heaving over tree-trunks, gasping, damning at the flies
 and heat,
 Longing for a long drink, out of silver, in the ship's cool
 lazaret.¹
 The moon came white and ghostly as we laid the treasure down,
 There was gear there'd make a beggar man as rich as Lima Town,
 Copper charms and silver trinkets from the chests of Spanish crews,
 Gold doubloons and double moidores, louis d'ors and portagues,

Clumsy yellow-metal earrings from the Indians of Brazil,
 Uncut emeralds out of Rio, bezoar stones¹ from Guayaquil;
 Silver, in the crude and fashioned, pots of old Arica bronze,
 Jewels from the bones of Incas desecrated by the Dons.
 We smoothed the place with mattocks, and we took and blazed the tree,
 Which marks yon where the gear is hid that none will ever see,
 And we laid aboard the ship again, and south away we steers,
 Through the loud surf of Los Muertos which is beating
 in my ears.
 I'm the last alive that knows it. All the rest have gone their ways,
 Killed, or died, or come to anchor in the old Mulatas
 Cays,
 And I go singing, fiddling, old and starved and in despair,
 And I know where all that gold is hid, if I were only there.
 It's not the way to end it all. I'm old, and nearly blind,
 And an old man's past's a strange thing, for it never leaves his mind.
 And I see in dreams, awhile, the beach, the sun's disc dipping red,
 And the tall ship, under topsails, swaying in past Nigger Head.

ON THE HIGH SEAS

be glad to step ashore there. Glad to take a pick and go to the lone blazed coco-palm tree in the place no others know,
and lift the gold and silver that has mouldered there for years
By the loud surf of Los Muertos which is beating in my ears.

FLANNAN ISLE

" Though three men dwell on Flannan Isle
To keep the lamp alight,
As we steer'd under the lee, we caught
No glimmer through the night! "

A passing ship at dawn had brought
The news; and quickly we set sail,
To find out what strange thing might ail
The keepers of the deep-sea light.

The winter day broke blue and bright,
With glancing sun and glancing spray,
As o'er the swell our boat made way,
As gallant as a gull in flight.

But, as we near'd the lonely Isle;
And look'd up at the naked height;
And saw the lighthouse towering white,
With blinded lantern, that all night

Had never shot a spark
 Of comfort through the dark,
 So ghostly in the cold sunlight
 It seem'd, that we were struck the while
 With wonder all too deep for words.

And, as into the tiny creek
 We stole beneath the hanging crag,
 We saw three queer, black, ugly birds—
 Too big, by far, in my belief,
 For guillemot or shag—
 Like seamen sitting bolt-upright
 Upon a half-tide reef:
 But, as we near'd, they plunged from sight,
 Without a sound, or spurt of white.

And still too mazed to speak,
 We landed; and made fast the boat;
 And climb'd the track in single file,
 Each wishing he was safe afloat,
 On any sea, however far,
 So it be far from Flannan Isle:
 And still we seem'd to climb, and ~~climb~~
 As though we'd lost all count of ~~time~~
 And so must climb for evermore.
 Yet, all too soon, we reached the ~~door~~—
 The black, sun-blister'd lighthouse ~~door~~
 That gaped for us ajar.

As, on the threshold, for a ~~space~~
 We paused, we seem'd to ~~breathe the air~~
 Of limewash and of tar,
 Familiar as our daily ~~breath~~

ON THE HIGH SEAS

As though 'twere some strange scent of death:
And so, yet wondering, side by side,
We stood a moment, still tongue-tied:
And each with black foreboding eyed
The door, ere we should fling it wide,
To leave the sunlight for the gloom:
Till, plucking courage up, at last,
Hard on each other's heels we pass'd
Into the living-room.

Yet, as we crowded through the door,
We only saw a table, spread
For dinner, meat and cheese and bread;
But all untouch'd; and no one there:
As though, when they sat down to eat,
Ere they could even taste,
Alarm had come; and they in haste
Had risen and left the bread and meat:
For at the table-head a chair
Lay tumbled on the floor.
We listen'd; but we only heard
The feeble cheeping of a bird
That starved upon its perch:
And, listening still, without a word,
We set about our hopeless search.

We hunted high, we hunted low,
And soon ransack'd the empty house;
Then o'er the Island, to and fro,
We ranged, to listen and to look
In every cranny, cleft or nook
That might have hid a bird or mouse:

But, though we search'd from shore to shore,
 We found no sign in any place:
 And soon again stood face to face
 Before the gaping door:
 And stole into the room once more
 As frighten'd children steal.

Aye: though we hunted high and low,
 And hunted everywhere,
 Of the three men's fate we found no trace
 Of any kind in any place,
 But a door ajar, and an untouch'd meal,
 And an overtoppled chair.

And, as we listen'd in the gloom
 Of that forsaken living-room—
 A chill clutch on our breath—
 We thought how ill-chance came to all
 Who kept the Flannan Light:
 And how the rock had been the death
 Of many a likely lad:

How six had come to a sudden end,
 And three had gone stark mad:
 And one whom we'd all known as friend
 Had leapt from the lantern one still night,
 And fallen dead by the lighthouse wall:
 And long we thought
 On the three we sought,
 And of what might yet befall.

Like currs a glance has brought to heel.
 We listen'd, flinching there:

And look'd, and look'd, on the untouch'd meal
And the overtoppled chair.

We seem'd to stand for an endless while,
Though still no word was said,
Three men alive on Flannan Isle,
Who thought on three men dead.

WILFRID WILSON GIBSON

THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER

PART I

It is an ancient Mariner,
And he stoppeth one of three.
—"By thy long grey beard and glittering eye,
Now wherefore stopp'st thou me?

An ancient Mariner meeteth three Gallants bidden to wedding-feast, and detaineth one.

"The Bridegroom's doors are opened wide,
And I am next of kin;
The guests are met, the feast is set:
May'st hear the merry din."

He holds him with his skinny hand;
"There was a ship," quoth he.
—"Hold off! unhand me, grey-beard loon!
Eftsoons his hand dropt he.

He holds him with his glittering eye—
The Wedding-Guest stood still,
And listens like a three years' child:
The Mariner hath his will.

The Wedding-Guest
is spellbound by the eye of the old se-faring man, and constrained to hear
his tale.

The Wedding-Guest sat on a stone;
He cannot choose but hear;
And thus spake on that ancient man,
The bright-eyed Mariner.

"The ship was cheered, the harbour cleared,
Merrily did we drop
Below the kirk, below the hill,
Below the lighthouse top.

"The Sun came up upon the left,
Out of the sea came he!
And he shone bright, and on the right,
Went down into the sea.

The Mariner tells how the ship sailed southward with a good wind and fair weather, till it reached the Line.

"Higher and higher every day,
Till over the mast at noon"—
The Wedding-Guest here beat his breast,
For he heard the loud bassoon.

The bride hath paced into the hall,
Red as a rose is she;
Nodding their heads before her goes
The merry minstrelsy.

The Wedding Guest
heareth the bridal music but the Mariner continueth
his tale.

The Wedding-Guest he beat his breast,
Yet he cannot choose but hear;
And thus spake on that ancient man,
The bright-eyed Mariner.

"And now the storm-blast came, and he
Was tyrannous and strong:
He struck with his o'ertaking wings,
And chased us south along.

The ship drawn by a storm toward the south pole

" With sloping masts and dipping prow,
As who pursued with yell and blow
Still treads the shadow of his foe,
And forward bends his head,
The ship drove fast, loud roared the blast,
And southward aye we fled.

" And now there came both mist and snow,
And it grew wondrous cold:
And ice, mast-high, came floating by,
As green as emerald.

"And through the drifts the snowy clifts
Did send a dismal sheen:
Nor shapes of men nor beasts we ken—
The ice was all between.

The land of ice, and of fearful sounds,
where no living
thing was to be seen.

" The ice was here, the ice was there,
The ice was all around:
It cracked and growled, and roared and howled,
Like noises in a swound!

" At length did cross an Albatross,
Thorough the fog it came;
As if it had been a Christian soul,
We hailed it in God's name.

Till a great sea-bird,
called the Albatross, came through the snow-fog, and was received with great joy and hospitality.

" It ate the food it ne'er had eat,
And round and round it flew.
The ice did split with a thunder-fit;
The helmsman steered us through!

" Nor dim nor red, like God's own head,
The glorious Sun uprist:
Then all averred, I had killed the bird
That brought the fog and mist.
' 'Twas right,' said they, ' such birds to slay,
That bring the fog and mist.'

But when the fog cleared off, they justify the same, and thus make themselves accomplices in the crime.

" The fair breeze blew, the white foam flew,
The furrow followed free;
We were the first that ever burst
Into that silent sea.

The fair breeze continues; the ship
enters the Pacific Ocean and sails northward, even till it reaches the Line.

" Down dropt the breeze, the sails dropt down,
'Twas sad as sad could be;
And we did speak only to break
The silence of the sea!

The ship hath been suddenly becalmed.

" All in a hot and copper sky,
The bloody Sun, at noon,
Right up above the mast did stand,
No bigger than the Moon.

" Day after day, day after day,
We stuck, nor breath nor motion;
As idle as a painted ship
Upon a painted ocean.

" Water, water, everywhere,
And all the boards did shrink;
Water, water, everywhere,
Nor any drop to drink.

And the Albatross
begins to be avenged

"The very deep did rot: O Christ!
That ever this should be!
Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs
Upon the slimy sea.

"About, about, in reel and rout
The death-fires danced at night;
The water, like a witch's oils,
Burnt green, and blue, and white.

"And some in dreams assurèd were
Of the Spirit that plagued us so;
Nine fathom deep he had followed us
From the land of mist and snow.

"And every tongue, through utter drought,
Was withered at the root;
We could not speak, no more than if
We had been choked with soot.

"Ah! well a-day! what evil looks
Had I from old and young!
Instead of the cross, the Albatross
About my neck was hung.

A spirit had followed them, one of the invisible inhabitants of this planet, neither departed souls nor angels, concerning whom the learned Jew, Josephus, and the Platonic Constantopolitan, Michael Psellus, may be consulted. They are very numerous, and there is no climate or element without one or more

The shipmates in their sore distress would fain throw the whole guilt on the ancient Mariner; in sign whereof they hang the dead sea-bird round his neck

PART III

"There passed a weary time. Each throat
Was parched, and glazed each eye.
A weary time! a weary time!
How glazed each weary eye
When looking westward, I beheld
A something in the sky.

The ancient Mariner beheldeth a sign in the element afar off

" At first it seemed a little speck,
And then it seemed a mist;
It moved and moved, and took at last
A certain shape, I wist.

A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist!
And still it neared and neared:
As if it dodged a water-sprite,
It plunged and tacked and veered.

" With throats unslaked, with black-lips baked,
We could not laugh nor wail;
Through utter drought all dumb we stood!
I bit my arm, I sucked the blood,
And cried, ' A sail! a sail! '

At its nearer approach, it seemeth
him to be a ship;
and at a dear ransom
he freeth his speech from the bonds of thirst.

" With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,
Agape they heard me call:
Gramercy! they for joy did grin,
And all at once their breath drew in,
As they were drinking all.

A flash of joy.

" ' See! see! ' (I cried) ' she tacks no more!
Hither to work us weal;
Without a breeze, without a tide,
She steadies with upright keel! '

And horror follows
For can it be a ship that comes onward without wind or tide?

" The western wave was all a-flame,
The day was well nigh done!
Almost upon the western wave
Rested the broad bright Sun;
When that strange shape drove suddenly
Betwixt us and the Sun.

" And straight the Sun was flecked with bars,
(Heaven's Mother send us grace!)
As if through a dungeon-grate he peered
With broad and burning face.

It seemeth him but the skeleton of a ship

" Alas! (thought I, and my heart beat loud)
How fast she nears and nears!
Are those her sails that glance in the Sun,
Like restless gossameres?

"Are those her ribs through which the Sun
Did peer, as through a grate?
And is that Woman all her crew?
Is that a Death? and are there two?
Is Death that Woman's mate?

And its ribs are seen as bars on the face of the setting Sun
The spectre-woman
and her death mate, and no other on board the skeleton-
ship

" Her lips were red, her looks were free,
Her locks were yellow as gold:
Her skin was as white as leprosy,
The Nightmare Life-in-Death was she,
Who thicks man's blood with cold.

Like vessel, like crew!

won!

Death and Life in Death have died for the ship's crew, and she (the latter) winneth the ancient Mariner

"The Sun's rim dips; the stars rush out:
At one stride comes the dark;
With far-heard whisper, o'er the sea,
Off shot the spectre-bark.

No twilight within the course of the Sun

ON THE HIGH SEAS

" We listened and looked sideways up!
Fear at my heart, as at a cup,
My life-blood seemed to sip!
The stars were dim, and thick the night,
The steersman's face by his lamp gleamed white;
From the sails the dew did drip—
Till clomb above the eastern bar
The hornèd Moon, with one bright star
Within the nether tip.

At the rising of the Moon,

" One after one, by the star-dogged Moon, One after another
Too quick for groan or sigh,
Each turned his face with a ghastly pang,
And cursed me with his eye.

" Four times fifty living men
(And I heard nor sigh nor groan),
With heavy thump, a lifeless lump,
They dropt down one by one.

His shipmates drop down dead.

" The souls did from their bodies fly—
They fled to bliss or woe!
And every soul, it passed me by,
Like the whizz of my cross-bow."

But Life-in-Death begins her work
the ancient Mariner

PART IV

" I fear thee, ancient Mariner!
I fear thy skinny hand!
And thou art long, and lank, and brown,
As is the ribbed sea-sand.

The Wedding-Guest
festereth that a spi-
is talking to him;

The look with which they looked on me
Had never passed away.

" An orphan's curse would drag to Hell
A spirit from on high;
But oh! more horrible than that
Is the curse in a dead man's eye!
Seven days, seven nights, I saw that curse,
And yet I could not die.

" The moving Moon went up the sky,
And nowhere did abide:
Softly she was going up,
And a star or two beside—

" Her beams bemoaned the sultry main
Like April hoar-frost spread;
But where the ship's huge shadow lay,
The charmed water burnt alway
A still and awful red.

" Beyond the shadow of the ship,
I watched the water-snakes:
They moved in tracks of shining white,
And when they reared, the elfish light
Fell off in hoary flakes.

" Within the shadow of the ship
I watch'd their rich attire:
Blue, glossy green, and velvet black,
They coiled and swam; and every track
Was a flash of golden fire.

In his loneliness and fixedness he yearneth towards the journeying Moon, and the stars that still sojourn, yet still move onward; and everywhere the blue sky belongs to them, and is their appointed rest, and their native country and their own natural homes,
which they enter unannounced, as foris that are certainly expected and yet there is a silent joy
at their arrival.

By the light of the Moon he beholdeth
God's creatures of the great calm.

"O happy living things! no tongue
 Their beauty might declare:
 A spring of love gushed from my heart,
 And I blessed them unaware:
 Sure my kind saint took pity on me,
 And I blessed them unaware.

Their beauty and their happiness

He bleaseth them in his heart.

"The selfsame moment I could pray;
 And from my neck so free
 The Albatross fell off, and sank
 Like lead into the sea.

The spell begins to break.

PART V

"O sleep! it is a gentle thing,
 Beloved from pole to pole!
 To Mary Queen the praise be given!
 She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven
 That slid into my soul.

"The silly buckets on the deck
 That had so long remained,
 I dreamt that they were filled with dew;
 And when I awoke, it rained.

By grace of the holy Mother, the ancient Mariner is refreshed with rain.

"My lips were wet, my throat was cold,
 My garments all were dank;
 Sure I had drunken in my dreams,
 And still my body drank.

" I moved, and could not feel my limbs :
I was so light—almost
I thought that I had died in sleep,
And was a blessèd ghost.

" And soon I heard a roaring wind :
It did not come anear;
But with its sound it shook the sails,
That were so thin and sere.

He heareth sounds,
and seeth strange sights and commotions in the sky and the element.

" The upper air burst into life!
And a hundred fire-flags sheen,
To and fro, they were hurried about;
And to and fro, and in and out,
The wan stars danced between.

" And the coming wind did roar more loud,
And the sails did sigh like sedge;
And the rain poured down from one black cloud;
The Moon was at its edge.

" The thick black cloud was cleft, and still
The Moon was at its side:
Like waters shot from some high crag,
The lightning fell with never a jag,
A river steep and wide.

" The loud wind never reached the ship,
Yet now the ship moved on!
Beneath the lightning and the Moon
The dead men gave a groan.

The bodies of the ship's crew are inspired, and the ship moves on;

" They groaned, they stirred, they all uprose,
Nor spake, nor moved their eyes;
It had been strange, e'en in a dream,
To have seen those dead men rise.

" The helmsman steered, the ship moved on;
Yet never a breeze up blew;
The mariners all 'gan work the ropes,
Where they were wont to do;
They raised their limbs like lifeless tools—
We were a ghastly crew.

" The body of my brother's son
Stood by me, knee to knee:
The body and I pulled at one rope,
But he said nought to me."

—" I fear thee, ancient Mariner! "
—" Be calm, thou Wedding-Guest!
'Twas not those souls that fled in pain,
Which to their corpses came again,
But a troop of spirits blest:

But not by the soul of the men, nor demons of earth middle air, but by blessed troop of angelic spirits, se-down by the invocation of the guardian saint

" For when it dawned—they dropped their arms,
And clustered round the mast;
Sweet sounds rose slowly through their mouths,
And from their bodies passed.

" Around, around, flew each sweet sound,
Then darted to the Sun;
Slowly the sounds came back again,
Now mixed, now one by one.

" Sometimes a-dropping from the sky
 I heard the skylark sing;
 Sometimes all little birds that are,
 How they seemed to fill the sea and air
 With their sweet jargoning!

" And now 'twas like all instruments,
 Now like a lonely flute;
 And now it is an angel's song,
 That makes the heavens be mute.

" It ceased; yet still the sails made on
 A pleasant noise till noon,
 A noise like of a hidden brook
 In the leafy month of June,
 That to the sleeping woods all night
 Singeth a quiet tune.

" Till noon we quietly sailed on,
 Yet never a breeze did breathe:
 Slowly and smoothly went the ship,
 Moved onward from beneath.

" Under the keel nine fathom deep,
 From the land of mist and snow,
 The Spirit slid; and it was he
 That made the ship to go.
 The sails at noon left off their tune,
 And the ship stood still also.

The lonesome Spirk from the South Pole carries on the ship as far as the Line, in obedience to the angelic troop, but still requireth vengeance.

" The Sun, right up above the mast,
 Had fixed her to the ocean:

But in a minute she 'gan stir,
 With a short uneasy motion—
 Backwards and forwards half her length,
 With a short uneasy motion.

"Then like a pawing horse let go,
 She made a sudden bound:
 It flung the blood into my head,
 And I fell down in a swoond.

"How long in that same fit I lay,
 I have not to declare;
 But ere my living life returned,
 I heard, and in my soul discerned
 Two voices in the air.

"'Is it he?' quoth one, 'is this the man?
 By Him who died on cross,
 With his cruel bow he laid full low
 The harmless Albatross.

"'The Spirit who bideth by himself
 In the land of mist and snow,
 He loved the bird that loved the man
 Who shot him with his bow.'

"The other was a softer voice,
 As soft as honey-dew:
 Quoth he, 'The man hath penance done,
 And penance more will do.'

The Polar Spirit's fellow-demons, the invisible inhabitants of the element, take part in his wrong,
 and two of them relate, one to the other, that penance long and heavy for the ancient Mariner hath been accorded to the Polar Spirit, who returneth southward

PART VI

First Voice

“ ‘ But tell me, tell me! speak again,
 Thy soft response renewing—
 What makes that ship drive on so fast?
 What is the Ocean doing? ’

Second Voice

“ ‘ Still as a slave before his lord,
 The Ocean hath no blast;
 His great bright eye most silently
 Up to the Moon is cast—

“ ‘ If he may know which way to go;
 For she guides him smooth or grim.
 See, brother, see! how graciously
 She looketh down on him.’

First Voice

“ ‘ But why drives on that ship so fast,
 Without or wave or wind? ’

The Mariner hath been cast into a trance; for the angelic power causeth the vessel to drive northward faster than human life could endure.

Second Voice

“ ‘ The air is cut away before,
 And closes from behind.

“ ‘ Fly, brother, fly! more high, more high!
 Or we shall be belated:
 For slow and slow that ship will go,
 When the Mariner’s trance is abated.’

The supernatural motion is retarded;
the Murderer awakes,
and his penance begins anew.

"I woke, and we were sailing on
As in a gentle weather:
'Twas night, calm night, the Moon was high;
The dead men stood together.

"All stood together on the deck,
For a charnel-dungeon fitter:
All fixed on me their stony eyes,
That in the Moon did glitter.

"The pang, the curse, with which they died,
Had never passed away:
I could not draw my eyes from theirs,
Nor turn them up to pray.

"And now this spell was snapt: once more
I viewed the ocean green,
And looked far forth, yet little saw
Of what had else been seen—

The curse is finally expelled.

"Like one that on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round, walks on,
And turns no more his head;
Because he knows a frightful fiend
Doth close behind him tread.

"But soon there breathed a wind on me,
Nor sound nor motion made:
Its path was not upon the sea,
In ripple or in shade.

" It raised my hair, it fanned my cheek
Like a meadow-gale of spring—
It mingled strangely with my fears,
Yet it felt like a welcoming.

" Swiftly, swiftly flew the ship,
Yet she sailed softly too;
Sweetly, sweetly blew the breeze—
On me alone it blew.

" Oh! dream of joy! is this indeed
The lighthouse top I see?
Is this the hill? is this the kirk?
Is this mine own countree?

And the ancient Mariner beheld
his native country

" We drifted o'er the harbour-bar,
And I with sobs did pray—
O let me be awake, my God!
Or let me sleep alway.

" The harbour-bay was clear as glass,
So smoothly it was strewn!
And on the bay the moonlight lay,
And the shadow of the Moon.

" The rock shone bright, the kirk no less,
That stands above the rock:
The moonlight steeped in silentness
The steady weathercock.

" And the bay was white with silent light,
Till, rising from the same,

Full many shapes, that shadows were,
In crimson colours came.

The angelic spirits leave the dead bodies,

"A little distance from the prow
Those crimson shadows were:
I turned my eyes upon the deck—
O Christ! what saw I there!

And appear in their own forms of light

"Each corse lay flat, lifeless and flat,
And, by the holy rood!
A man all light, a seraph-man,
On every corse there stood.

"This seraph-band, each waved his hand:
It was a heavenly sight!
They stood as signals to the land,
Each one a lovely light:

"This seraph-band, each waved his hand,
No voice did they impart—
No voice; but oh! the silence sank
Like music on my heart.

"But soon I heard the dash of oars,
I heard the Pilot's cheer;
My head was turned perforce away,
And I saw a boat appear.

"The Pilot and the Pilot's boy,
I heard them coming fast:
Dear Lord in Heaven! it was a joy
The dead men could not blast.

' I saw a third—I heard his voice:
It is the Hermit good!
He singeth loud his godly hymns
That he makes in the wood.
He'll shrieve my soul, he'll wash away
The Albatross's blood.

PART VII

" This Hermit good lives in that wood
Which slopes down to the sea.
How loudly his sweet voice he rears!
He loves to talk with mariners
That come from a far countree.

The Hermit of the Wood

" He kneels at morn, and noon, and eve—
He hath a cushion plump:
It is the moss that wholly hides
The rotted old oak-stump.

" The skiff-boat neared: I heard them talk,
' Why, this is strange, I trow!
Where are those lights so many and fair,
That signal made but now? '

" ' Strange, by my faith,' the Hermit
said—

Approacheth the ship with wonder.

' And they answered not our cheer!
The planks look warped! and see those sails,
How thin they are and serel
I never saw aught like to them,
Unless perchance it were

" ' Brown skeletons of leaves that lag
My forest-brook along;
When the ivy-tod is heavy with snow,
And the owlet whoops to the wolf below,
That eats the she-wolf's young.' "

" ' Dear Lord! it hath a fiendish look '—
(The Pilot made reply)
' I am a-feared.'—' Push on, push on! '
Said the Hermit cheerily.

" The boat came closer to the ship,
But I nor spake nor stirred;
The boat came close beneath the ship,
And straight a sound was heard.

" Under the water it rumbled on,
Still louder and more dread:
It reached the ship, it split the bay;
The ship went down like lead.

The ship suddenly sinks

" Stunned by that loud and dreadful sound,
Which sky and ocean smote,
Like one that hath been seven days drowned
My body lay afloat;
But swift as dreams, myself I found
Within the Pilot's boat.

The ancient Mariner is saved in the Pilot boat

" Upon the whirl, where sank the ship,
The boat spun round and round;
And all was still, save that the hill
Was telling of the sound.

ON THE HIGH SEAS

"I moved my lips—the Pilot shrieked
And fell down in a fit;
The holy Hermit raised his eyes,
And prayed where he did sit.

"I took the oars: the Pilot's boy,
Who now doth crazy go,
Laughed loud and long, and all the while
His eyes went to and fro.
'Hal' hal' quoth he, 'full plain I see
The Devil knows how to row.'

"And now, all in my own countree,
I stood on the firm land.
The Hermit stepped forth from the boat,
And scarcely he could stand.

"O shrieve me, shrieve me, holy man!
The Hermit crossed his brow,
'Say quick,' quoth he, 'I bid thee say—
What manner of man art thou?'

"Forthwith this frame of mine was wrenched
With a woful agony,
Which forced me to begin my tale;
And then it left me free.

"Since then, at an uncertain hour,
That agony returns:
And till my ghastly tale is told,
This heart within me burns.

"I pass, like night, from land to land;
I have strange power of speech;

That moment that his face I see,

"What loud uproar bursts from that door!
The wedding-guests are there:
But in the garden-bower the bride
And bridesmaids singing are:
And hark, the little vesper bell,
Which biddeth me to prayer!

"O Wedding-Guest! this soul hath been
Alone on a wide, wide sea;
So lonely 'twas, that God Himself
Scarce seemèd there to be.

"O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company!—

"To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends,
And youths and maidens gay!

"Farewell, farewell! but this I tell
To thee, thou Wedding-Guest!
He prayeth well, who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast.

"He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

And to teach by his own example, love
and reverence to all things that God made and loveth

ON THE HIGH SEAS

The Mariner, whose eye is bright,
Whose beard with age is hoar,
Is gone: and now the Wedding-Guest
Turned from the bridegroom's door.

He went like one that hath been stunned,
And is of sense forlorn:
A sadder and a wiser man,
He rose the morrow morn.

CARGOES

Quinquireme of Nineveh from distant Ophir
Rowing home to haven in sunny Palestine,
With a cargo of ivory
And apes and peacocks,
Sandalwood, cedarwood, and sweet white wine.

Stately Spanish galleon coming from the Isthmus,
Dipping through the Tropics by the palm-green shores,
With a cargo of diamonds,
Emeralds, amethysts,
Topazes, and cinnamon, and gold moidores.

Dirty British coaster with a salt-caked smoke stack
Butting through the Channel in the mad March days,
With a cargo of Tyne coal,
Road-rail, pig-lead,
Firewood, ironware, and cheap tin trays.

THE FOOTPATH WAY

Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily hent the stile-a:
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE OLD SQUIRE

I like the hunting of the hare
Better than that of the fox;
I like the joyous morning air,
And the crowing of the cocks.

I like the calm of the early fields,
The ducks asleep by the lake,
The quiet hour which Nature yields,
Before mankind is awake.

I like the pheasants and feeding things
Of the unsuspecting morn;
I like the flap of the wood-pigeon's wings
As she rises from the corn.

OUT OF DOORS

I like the blackbird's shriek, and his rush
From the turnips as I pass by,
And the partridge hiding her head in a bush,
For her young ones cannot fly.

I like these things, and I like to ride
When all the world is in bed,
To the top of the hill where the sky grows wide,
And where the sun grows red.

The beagles at my horse heels trot
In silence after me;
There's Ruby, Roger, Diamond, Dot,
Old Slut and Margery,—

A score of names well-used and dear,
The names my childhood knew;
The horn, with which I rouse their cheer,
Is the horn my father blew.

I like the hunting of the hare
Better than that of the fox;
The new world still is all less fair
Than the old world it mocks.

I covet not a wider range
Than these dear manors give;
I take my pleasures without change,
And as I lived I live.

I leave my neighbours to their thought;
My choice it is, and pride,

OUT OF DOORS

I like the hunting of the hare;
New sports I hold in scorn.
I like to be as my fathers were
In the days ere I was born.

TEWKESBURY ROAD

It is good to be out on the road, and going one knows not where,
Going through meadow and village, one knows not whither nor why;
Through the grey light drift of the dust, in the keen cool rush of the air,
Under the flying white clouds, and the broad blue lift
of the sky;

And to halt at the chattering brook, in the tall green fern at the brink
Where the harebell grows, and the gorse, and the foxgloves purple and white;
Where the shy-eyed delicate deer troop down to the pools to drink,
When the stars are mellow and large at the coming on of the night.

O! to feel the warmth of the rain, and the homely smell of the earth,
Is a tune for the blood to jig to, a joy past power of words;

THOMAS HARDY

And the blessed green comely meadows seem all a-ripple

At the lilt of the shifting feet, and the dear wild cry

WEATHERS

This is the weather the cuckoo likes,
And so do I;
When showers betumble the chestnut spikes,
And nestlings fly:
And the little brown nightingale bills his best,
And they sit outside at "The Travellers' Rest,"
And maids come forth sprig-muslin drest,
And citizens dream of the south and west,
And so do I.

This is the weather the shepherd shuns,
And so do I;
When beeches drip on browns and duns,
And thresh, and ply;
And hill-hid tides throb, throe on throe,
And meadow rivulets overflow,
And drops on gate-bars hang in a row,
And rooks in families homeward go,
And so do I.

ODE TO THE NORTH-EAST WIND

Welcome, wild North-easter!
 Shame it is to see
 Odes to every zephyr;
 Ne'er a verse to thee.
 Welcome, black North-easter!
 O'er the German foam;
 O'er the Danish moorlands,
 From thy frozen home.
 Tired we are of summer,
 Tired of gaudy glare,
 Showers soft and steaming,
 Hot and breathless air.
 Tired of listless dreaming,
 Through the lazy day:
 Jovial wind of winter,
 Turn us out to play!
 Sweep the golden reed-beds;
 Crisp the lazy dyke;
 Hunger into madness
 Every plunging pike.
 Fill the lake with wild-fowl;
 Fill the marsh with snipe;
 While on dreary moorlands
 Lonely curlew pipe.
 Through the black fir-forest
 Thunder harsh and dry.
 Shattering down the snow-flakes
 Off the curdled sky.

Hark! The brave North-easter!
 Breast-high lies the scent,
 On byholt¹ and headland,
 Over heath and bent.²
 Chime ye dappled, luscious, luscious!

Let the horses go!
 Chime, ye dappled darlings,
 Down the roaring blast;
 You shall see a fox die
 Ere an hour be past.
 Go! and rest to-morrow,
 Hunting in your dreams,
 While our skates are ringing
 O'er the frozen streams.
 Let the luscious South-wind
 Breathe in lovers' sighs,
 While the lazy gallants
 Bask in ladies' eyes.
 What does he but soften
 Heart alike and pen?
 'Tis the hard grey weather
 Breeds hard English men.
 What's the soft South-wester?
 'Tis the ladies' breeze,
 Bringing home their true loves
 Out of all the seas
 But the black North-easter,
 Through the snowstorm hurled,

A FINE DAY

Clear had the day been from the dawn,
All chequered was the sky,
Thin clouds like scarfs of cobweb lawn
Veiled heaven's most glorious eye.
The wind had no more strength than this,
That leisurely it blew,
To make one leaf the next to kiss
That closely by it grew.

THE WINDMILL

The green corn waving in the dale,
The ripe grass waving on the hill:
I lean across the paddock pale
And gaze upon the giddy mill.

ROBERT BRIDGES

Its hurtling sails a mighty sweep
Cut thro' the air: with rushing sound
Each strikes in fury down the steep,
Rattles, and whirls in chase around.

Beside his sacks the miller stands
On high within the open door:
A book and pencil in his hands,
His grist and meal he reckoneth o'er.

His tireless merry slave, the wind,
Is busy with his work to-day:
From whencesoe'er he comes to grind;
He hath a will and knows the way.

He gives the creaking sails a spin,
The circling millstones faster flee,
The shuddering timbers groan within,
And down the shoot the meal runs free.

The miller giveth him no thanks,
And doth not much his work o'erlook:
He stands beside the sacks, and ranks
The figures in his dusty book.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE

Orpheus with his lute made trees
And the mountain tops that freeze
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung: as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE ANGLER'S SONG

As inward love breeds outward talk,
The hound some praise, and some the hawk;

Some, better pleased with private sport,
Use tennis; some a mistress court:
But these delights I neither wish,
Nor envy, while I freely fish.

Who hunts, doth oft in danger ride;
Who hawks, lures oft both far and wide;
Who uses games, shall often prove
A loser; but who falls in love
Is fettered in fond Cupid's snare:
My angle breeds me no such care.

Of recreation there is none
So free as fishing is alone;
All other pastimes do no less
Than mind and body both possess;
My hand alone my work can do,
So I can fish and study too.

I care not, I, to fish in seas—
Fresh rivers best my mind do please,
Whose sweet calm course I contemplate,
And seek in life to imitate:
In civil bounds I fain would keep,
And for my past offences weep.

OUT OF DOORS

And when the timorous trout I wait
To take, and he devours my bait,
How poor a thing, sometimes I find,
Will captivate a greedy mind;
And when none bite, I praise the wise,
Whom vain allurements ne'er surprise.

But yet, though while I fish I fast,
I make good fortune my repast;
And thereunto my friend invite,
In whom I more than that delight:
Who is more welcome to my dish
Than to my angle was my fish.

As well content no prize to take,
As use of taken prize to make:
For so our Lord was pleasèd, when
He fishers made fishèrs of men;
Where, which is in no other game,
A man may fish and praise His name.

The first men that our Saviour dear
Did choose to wait upon Him here,
Blest fishers were, and fish the last
Food was that He on earth did taste:
I therefore strive to follow those Whom He to follow Him hath chose.

IZAACK WALTON

THE SOLITARY REAPER

Behold her, single in the field,
 Yon solitary Highland Lass!
 Reaping and singing by herself;
 Stop here, or gently pass!
 Alone she cuts and binds the grain,
 And sings a melancholy strain;
 O listen! for the vale profound
 Is overflowing with the sound.

No nightingale did ever chaunt
 More welcome notes to weary bands
 Of travellers in some shady haunt,
 Among Arabian sands:
 A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
 In spring-time from the Cuckoo-bird,
 Breaking the silence of the seas
 Among the farthest Hebrides.

Will no one tell me what she sings?—
 Perhaps the plaintive numbers flow
 For old, unhappy, far-off things,
 And battles long ago:
 Or is it some more humble lay,
 Familiar matter of to-day?
 Some natural sorrow, loss, or pain,
 That has been, and may be again?

Whate'er the theme, the maiden sang
 As if her song could have no ending;

OUT OF DOORS

I saw her singing at her work,
And o'er the sickle bending;—
I listen'd, motionless and still;
And, as I mounted up the hill,
The music in my heart I bore
Long after it was heard no more.

WESTMINSTER BRIDGE

Earth has not anything to show more fair:
Dull would he be of soul who could pass by
A sight so touching in its majesty:
This City now doth like a garment wear
The beauty of the morning; silent, bare,
Ships, towers, domes, theatres, and temples lie
Open unto the fields, and to the sky;
All bright and glittering in the smokeless air.
Never did sun more beautifully steep
In his first splendour, valley, rock, or hill;
Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep!
The river glideth at his own sweet will:
Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;
And all that mighty heart is lying still!

THE BARN

Rain-sunken roof, grown green and thin
For sparrows' nests and starlings' nests;
Dishevelled eaves; unwieldy doors,
Cracked rusty pump, and oaken floors,
And idly-pencilled names and jests
Upon the posts within.

The light pales at the spider's lust,
The wind rangs through the shattered pane:
An empty hop-poke spreads across
The gaping frame to mend the loss
And keeps out sun as well as rain,
Mildewed with clammy dust.

The smell of apples stored in hay
And homely cattle-cake is there.
Use and disuse have come to terms,
The walls are hollowed out by worms,
But men's feet keep the mid-floor bare
And free from worse decay.

The trees of Goat Island growing higher, till sudden are Huge walls of the falls plunging down to the battered

Avalanches of wheeling water unceasing.

The foot of the falls: the slippery rounds of rock;
The dark small earth, the crumpled rim of the sky,
The curling ruining columns that crash from on high
To the cloudy chasms with wild reiterate shock,
Hissing and hurrying cliffs of foam down-pouring:
Aloft, one curve like marble with smooth green face,
An awful illusion of stillness in the race
Of eternal Niagara louder and louder roaring.

BIRDS AND BEASTS

TO THE CUCKOO

O blithe New-comer! I have heard,
I hear thee and rejoice.
O Cuckoo! shall I call thee Bird,
Or but a wandering Voice?

While I am lying on the grass
Thy twofold shout I hear,
From hill to hill it seems to pass,
At once far off, and near.

Though babbling only to the vale
Of sunshine and of flowers,
Thou bringest unto me a tale
Of visionary hours.

Thrice welcome, darling of the Spring!
Even yet thou art to me
No bird, but an invisible thing,
A voice, a mystery;

The same whom in my schoolboy days
I listened to; that Cry

BIRDS AND BEASTS

Which made me look a thousand ways
In bush, and tree, and sky.

To seek thee did I often rove
Through woods and on the green;
And thou wert still a hope, a love;
Still longed for, never seen.

And I can listen to thee yet;
Can lie upon the plain
And listen, till I do beget
That golden time again.

O blessèd Bird! the earth we pace
Again appears to be
An unsubstantial, faery place,
That is fit home for Thee!

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH .

THE SNARE

I hear a sudden cry of pain!
There is a rabbit in a snare:
Now I hear the cry again,
But I cannot tell from where.

But I cannot tell from where
He is calling out for aid;
Crying on the frightened air,
Making everything afraid.

WILLIAM BLAKE

What the hammer? what the chain?
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? what dread grasp
Dare its deadly terrors clasp?

When the stars threw down their spears,
And watered heaven with their tears,
Did He smile His work to see?
Did He who made the lamb make thee?

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
frame thy fearful symmetry?

WILLIAM BLAKE

BIRDS AND BEASTS

With monstrous head and sickening cry
And ears like errant wings,
The devil's walking parody
On all four-footed things.

The tattered outlaw of the earth,
Of ancient crooked will;
Starve, scourge, deride me: I am dumb,
I keep my secret still.

Fools! For I also had my hour;
One far fierce hour and sweet:
There was a shout about my ears,
And palms before my feet.

GILBERT KEITH CHESTERTON

THE TIGER

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire—
What the hand dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder, and what art,
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And, when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand, and what dread feet?

DUCKS

I

From troubles of the world
I turn to ducks,
Beautiful comical things
Sleeping or curled
Their heads beneath white wings
By water cool,
Or finding curious things
To eat in various mucks
Beneath the pool,
Tails uppermost, or waddling
Sailor-like on the shores
Of ponds, or paddling —Left! right!—with fanlike feet
Which are for steady oars
When they (white galleys) float
Each bird a boat
Rippling at will the sweet
Wide waterway. . . .
When night is fallen you creep
Upstairs, but drakes and dillies
Nest with pale water-stars,
Moonbeams and shadow bars,
And water-lilies:
Fearful too much to sleep
Since they've no locks
To click against the teeth
Of weasel and fox.

And warm beneath
Are eggs of cloudy green
Whence hungry rats and lean
Would stealthily suck
New life, but for the mien,
The bold ferocious mien
Of the mother-duck.

II

Yes, ducks are valiant things
On nests of twigs and straws,
And ducks are soothy things
And lovely on the lake
When that the sunlight draws
Thereon their pictures dim
In colours cool.
And when beneath the pool
They dabble, and when they swim
And make their rippling rings,
O ducks are beautiful things!

But ducks are comical things:—
As comical as you.

Quack!

They waddle round, they do,
They eat all sorts of things.
And then they quack.
By barn and stable and stack
They wander at their will,
But if you go too near
They look at you through black
Small topaz-tinted eyes

BIRDS AND BEASTS

And wish you ill.
Triangular and clear
They leave their curious track
In mud at the water's edge,
And there amid the sedge
And slime they gobble and peer Saying " Quack! quack! "

III

When God had finished the stars and whirl of coloured suns
He turned His mind from big things to fashion little ones,
Beautiful tiny things (like daisies) He made, and the
He made the comical ones in case the minds of men
Should stiffen and become
Dull, humourless and glum:
And so forgetful of their Maker be
As to take even themselves—quite seriously.
Caterpillars and cats are lively and excellent puns:
All God's jokes are good—even the practical ones!
And as for the duck, I think God must have smiled a bit
Seeing those eyes blink on the day He fashioned it.
And He's probably laughing still at the sound that comes out of its bill!

F. W. HARVEY

THE HUMAN ATTITUDE

When I catch myself agape
 Grinning at a Barbary ape,
 Or assuming hatred lies
 In the hungry tiger's eyes,—
 When I call the vulture "vile,"
 Or "devilish" the crocodile,
 Tigers "cruel," camels' humps
 "Ugly," or the roseate rumps
 Which baboons so proudly show
 As they swing from bough to bough.
 When I call the boar "malicious,"
 Kite "revolting," grizzly "vicious,"
 "Quaint" the lithe prehensile nose
 The elephant so blithely blows.
 When I say of birds, "The He-male Warbles to attract the She-male,"
 Or "Brute beasts are soulless,"—I
 Do not merely simply lie—
 I commit a sheer enormity,
 Like one jeering at deformity—
 I curse the day and bless the night;
 In short, I sin against the light.
 When I reluctantly arise,
 Breakfast, after exercise,
 With dispassionate disdain
 And breathlessly approach my train
 With my bowler on and spats
 Do the sparrows, dogs, and cats
 Mock me in amused delight?

BIRDS AND BEASTS

No, they don't, but well they might.
Animals have no pretence
Veiling their indifference.
They don't overeat nor whine,
Label all things "yours" and "mine."
Never vulgar, avaricious,
Sentimental, superstitious;
Never snobbish, vengeful, vain.
Pleasure they accept and pain.
Vice is unknown, filth abhorred.
They do good without reward.
When their lives on earth are done,
Happily, I think, they run
Over death's dividing dark;
Where those saints, who ran the Ark—
Noah and Japhet, Ham and Shem—
Probably look after them.

GEOFFREY DEARMER

THE PARROT

The old professor of Zoology
Shook his long beard and spake these words to me:
"Compare the Parrot with the Dove. They are
In shape the same: in hue dissimilar.
The Indian bird, which may be sometimes seen
In red or black, is generally green.
His beak is very hard: it has been known
To crack thick nuts and penetrate a stone.
Alas! that when you teach him how to speak
You find his head is harder than his beak.

The passionless Malay can safely drub
 The pates of parrots with an iron club:
 The ingenious fowls, like boys they beat at school,
 Soon learn to recognize a Despot's rule.

Now if you'd train a parrot, catch him young
While soft the mouth and tractable the tongue.
 Old birds are fools: they dodder in their speech,
 More eager to forget than you to teach;
 They swear one curse, then gaze at you askance,
 And all oblivion thickens in their glance.

Thrice blest whose parrot of his own accord
 Invents new phrases to delight his Lord,
 Who spurns the dull quotidian task and tries
 Selected words that prove him good and wise.
 Ah, once it was my privilege to know
 A bird like this . . .

But that was long ago! "

THE WILD DUCK

Twilight. Red in the west.
 Dimness. A glow on the wood.
 The teams plod home to rest.
 The wild duck come to glean.

 What a wild cry in the pool;
 What things have the farm ducks seen
 That they cry so—huddle and cry?

Only the soul that goes.

TWILIGHT TO SUNRISE

THE FALLING NIGHT

Shepherds all, and maidens fair,
Fold your flocks up, for the air
'Gins to thicken, and the sun
Already his great course hath run.
See the dew-drops, how they kiss
Every little flower that is,
Hanging on their velvet heads,
Like a rope of crystal beads:
See the heavy clouds low falling,
And bright Hesperus down calling
The dead Night from under ground;
At whose rising, mists unbound,
Damps and vapours fly apace,
Hovering o'er the wanton face
Of these pastures, where they come,
Striking dead both bud and bloom:
Therefore, from such danger lock
Every one his lovèd flock;
And let your dogs lie loose without,
Lest the wolf come as a scout
From the mountain, and ere day,
Bear a lamb or kid away;

TWILIGHT TO SUNRISE

Or the crafty thievish fox
Break upon your simple flocks.
To secure yourselves from these,
Be not too secure in ease;
Let one eye his watches keep,
Whilst the other eye doth sleep;
So you shall good shepherds prove,
And for ever hold the love
Of our great god. Sweetest slumbers,
And soft silence fall in numbers
On your eyelids! So, farewell!
Thus I end my evening's knell.

JOHN FLETCHER

THE SPLENDOUR FALLS ON CASTLE WALLS

The splendour falls on castle walls
And snowy summits old in story:
The long light shakes across the lakes,
And the wild cataract leaps in glory.
Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,
Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

O hark, O hear! how thin and clear,
And thinner, clearer, farther going!
O sweet and far from cliff and scar
The horns of Elfland faintly blowing!
Blow, let us hear the purple glens replying:
Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

O love, they die in yon rich sky,
 They faint on hill or field or river:
 Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
 And grow for ever and for ever.
 Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,
 And answer, echoes, answer, dying, dying, dying.

SILVER

Slowly, silently, now the moon
 Walks the night in her silver shoon;
 This way, and that, she peers, and sees
 Silver fruit upon silver trees;
 One by one the casements catch
 Her beams beneath the silvery thatch;
 Couched in his kennel, like a log,
 With paws of silver sleeps the dog;
 From their shadowy cote the white breasts peep
 Of doves in a silver-feathered sleep;
 A harvest mouse goes scampering by,
 With silver claws, and silver eye;
 And moveless fish in the water gleam,
 By silver reeds in a silver stream.

TO THE EVENING STAR

Thou fair-haired Angel of the Evening,
 Now, whilst the sun rests on the mountains, light
 Thy bright torch of love: thy radiant crown
 Put on, and smile upon our evening bed.

AUTUMN TO SUMMER

Twirling them by the window pane
With thousand others down the lane.

I love to see the shaking twig
Dance till the shut of eve,
The sparrow on the cottage rig,
Whose chirp would make believe
That Spring was just now flirting by
In Summer's lap with flowers to lie.

I love to see the cottage smoke
Curl upwards through the trees,
The pigeons nestled round the cote
On November days like these:
The cock upon the dunghill crowing,
The mill-sails on the heath a-going.

The feather from the raven's breast
Falls on the stubble lea,
The acorns near the old crow's nest
Drop pattering down the tree:
The grunting pigs that wait for all,
Scramble and hurry where they fall.

JOHN CLARE

TO AUTUMN

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness!
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eaves run;

To bend with apples the moss'd cottage-trees,
 And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
 To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
 With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
 And still more, later flowers for the bees,
 Until they think warm days will never cease,
 For Summer has o'er-brimm'd their clammy cells.

Who hath not seen thee oft amid thy store?
 Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find
 Thee sitting careless on a granary floor,
 Thy hair soft-lifted by the winnowing wind;
 Or on a half-reap'd furrow sound asleep,
 Drows'd with the fumes of poppies, while thy hook
 S pares the next swath and all its twined flowers;
 And sometimes like a gleaner thou dost keep
 Steady thy laden head across a brook;
 Or by a cider-press, with patient look,
 Thou watchest the last ooziings, hours by hours.

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
 Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,
 While barr'd clouds bloom the soft-dying day,
 And touch the stubble-plains with rosy hue;
 Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn
 Among the river salallows, borne aloft
 Or sinking as the light wind lives or dies;
 And full-grown lambs loud bleat from hilly bourn;
 Hedge-crickets sing; and now with treble soft
 The redbreast whistles from a garden-croft,
 And gathering swallows twitter in the skies.

BLOW, BLOW, THOU WINTER WIND

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
 Thou art not so unkind
 As man's ingratitude;
 Thy tooth is not so keen,
 Because thou art not seen,
 Although thy breath be rude.

Heigh-hol sing, heigh-hol unto the green holly:
 Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly:
 Then heigh-ho, the holly!
 This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
 That dost not bite so nigh
 As benefits forgot:
 Though thou the waters warp,¹
 Thy sting is not so sharp
 As friend remember'd not.

Heigh-hol sing, heigh-hol unto the green holly:
 Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly:
 Then heigh-ho, the holly!
 This life is most jolly.

A WINTER SONG

*Up in the morning's no for me,
Up in the morning early;
When o' the hills are cover'd wi' snaw
I'm sure it's winter fairly.*

Cauld blaws the wind frae east to west,
The drift is driving sairly;
Sae loud and shrill's I hear the blast,
I'm sure it's winter fairly.

Up in the morning, etc.

AUTUMN TO SUMMER

The birds sit chittering in the thorn,
A' day they fare but sparely;
And lang's the night frae c'en to morn;
I'm sure it's winter fairly.

Up in the morning, etc.

SKATING

And in the frosty season, when the sun
Was set, and visible for many a mile
The cottage windows blazed through twilight gloom,
I heeded not their summons: happy time
It was indeed for all of us—for me
It was a time of rapture! Clear and loud
The village clock tolled six,—I wheeled about,
Proud and exulting like an untired horse
That cares not for his home. All shod with steel,
We hissed along the polished ice in games
Confederate, imitative of the chase^a
And woodland pleasures,—the resounding horn,
The pack loud chiming, and the hunted hare.
So through the darkness and the cold we flew,
And not a voice was idle; with the din
Smitten, the precipices rang aloud;
The leafless trees and every icy crag
Tinkled like iron; while far distant hills
Into the tumult sent an alien sound
Of melancholy not unnoticed, while the stars
Eastward were sparkling clear, and in the west

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

The orange sky of evening died away.
Not seldom from the uproar I retired
Into a silent bay, or sportively
Glanced sideways, leaving the tumultuous throng,
To cut across the reflex of a star
That fled, and, flying still before me, gleamed
Upon the glassy plain; and oftentimes,
When we had given our bodies to the wind,
And all the shadowy banks on either side
Came sweeping through the darkness, spinning-still

The rapid line of motion, then at once
Have I, reclining back upon my heels,
Stopped short; yet still the solitary cliffs
Wheeled by me—even as if the earth had rolled
With visible motion her diurnal round!
Behind me did they stretch in solemn train,
Feebler and feebler, and I stood and watched
Till all was tranquil as a dreamless sleep.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

OLD WINTER

Old Winter, sad, in snow yclad,
Is making a doleful din;
But let him howl till he crack his jaw,
We will not let him in.

Ay, let him lift from the billowy drift
His hoary, haggard form,
And scowling stand, with his wrinkled hand
Outstretching to the storm.

AUTUMN TO SUMMER

And let his weird and sleety beard
Stream loose upon the blast,
And, rustling, chime to the tinkling rime
From his bald head falling fast.

Let his baleful breath shed blight and death
On herb and flower and tree;
And brooks and ponds in crystal bonds
Bind fast, but what care we?

Let him push at the door, in the chimney roar,
And rattle the window pane;
Let him in at us spy with his icicle eye,
But he shall not entrance gain.

Let him gnaw, forsooth, with his freezing tooth,
On our roof-tiles, till he tire;
But we care not a whit, as we jovial sit
Before our blazing fire.

Come, lads, let's sing, till the rafters ring;
Come push the can about—
From our snug fireside this Christmas-tide
We'll keep old Winter out.

LONDON SNOW

When men were all asleep the snow came flying,
In large white flakes falling on the city brown,
Stealthily and perpetually settling and loosely lying,
Hushing the latest traffic of the drowsy town;

Deadening, muffling, stifling its murmurs failing;
 Lazily and incessantly floating down and down:
 Silently sifting and veiling road, roof and railing;
 Hiding difference, making unevenness even,
 Into angles and crevices softly drifting and sailing.

Of the winter dawning, the strange unheavenly glare:
 The eye marvelled—marvelled at the dazzling whiteness;

The ear hearkened to the stillness of the solemn air;
 No sound of wheel rumbling nor of foot falling,
 And the busy morning cries came thin and spare.

Then boys I heard, as they went to school, calling,
 They gathered up the crystal manna to freeze
 Their tongues with tasting, their hands with snow-balling;

Or rioted in a drift, plunging up to the knees;
 Or peering up from under the white-mossed wonder,
 "O look at the trees!" they cried, "O look at the trees!"

With lessened load a few carts creak and blunder,
 Following along the white deserted way,
 A country company long dispersed asunder:

When now—

For now doors open, and war is waged with the snow;
 And trains of sombre men, past tale of number,
 Tread long brown paths, as toward their toil they go;

AUTUMN TO SUMMER

But even for them awhile no cares encumber
Their minds diverted; the daily word is unspoken,
The daily thoughts of labour and sorrow slumber
At the sight of the beauty that greets them, for the charm they have broken.

ROBERT BRIDGES

SNOW IN THE SUBURBS

Every branch big with it,
Bent every twig with it;
Every fork like a white web-foot;
Every street and pavement mute:
Some flakes have lost their way, and grope back upward, when Meeting those meandering down they turn and descend again.
The palings are glued together like a wall,
And there is no waft of wind with the fleecy fall.

A sparrow enters the tree,
Whereon immediately
A snow-lump thrice his own slight size
Descends on him and showers his head and eyes,
And overturns him,
And near inurns him,

And lights on a nether twig, when its brush
Starts off a volley of other lodging lumps with a rush.

The steps are a blanched slope,
Up which, with feeble hope,
A black cat comes, wide-eyed and thin;
And we take him in.

SPRING, THE SWEET SPRING

Spring, the sweet Spring is the world's pleasant time:

'Tis the time that the world's great joy brings,
'Tis the time that the world's great joy brings,

Cuckoo, jug-jug, pu-we, to-witta-woo!

Lambs frisk and play, the shepherds pipe all day,
And we hear aye birds tune this merry lay,

Cuckoo, jug-jug, pu-we, to-witta-woo!

The fields breathe sweet, the daisies kiss our feet,
Young lovers meet, old wives a-sunning sit,
In every street these tunes our ears do greet,

THE PILGRIM: HIS CHARACTER

THE VALOROUS PILGRIM

Who would true valour see,
Let him come hither;
One here will constant be,
Come wind, come weather;
There's no discouragement
Shall make him once relent
His first avowed intent
To be a pilgrim.

Whoso beset him round
With dismal stories,
Do but themselves confound,
His strength the more is.
No lion can him fright;
He'll with a giant fight,
But he will have a right
To be a pilgrim.

Hobgoblin nor foul fiend
Can daunt his spirit;
He knows he at the end
Shall life inherit.

THE PILGRIM: HIS CHARACTER

Then fancies fly away,
He'll not fear what men say,
He'll labour night and day
To be a pilgrim.

JOHN BUNYAN

A MAN'S A MAN FOR A' THAT

Is there for honest poverty
That hangs his head, and a' that?
The coward-slave, we pass him by,
We dare be poor for a' that!
For a' that, and a' that,
Our toils obscure, and a' that;
The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.

What though on hamely fare we dine,
Wear hoddin¹ grey, and a' that;
Gie fools their silks, and knaves their wine,
A man's a man for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Their tinsel show, and a' that,
The honest man, though e'er sac poor,
Is king o' men for a' that.

You see yon birkie, ca'd a lord,
Wha struts, and stares, and a' that;
Though hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a coof² for a' that:

² Stupid fellow.

For a' that, and a' that,¹
 His riband, star and a' that.
 The man of independent mind,
 He looks and laughs at a' that!

A king can mak' a belted knight,
 A marquis, duke, and a' that;
 But an honest man's aboon his might,
 Guid faith he mauna fa' that!
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Their dignities, and a' that,
 The pith o' sense, and pride o' worth
 Are higher rank than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may—
 As come it will, for a' that—
 That sense and worth, o'er a' the earth,
 May bear the gree,¹ and a' that;
 For a' that, and a' that,
 It's comin' yet for a' that.
 That man to man, the world o'er,
 Shall brothers be for a' that.

THE SECRET OF CONTENTMENT

He that is down, needs fear no fall,
 He that is low, no pride;
 He that is humble ever shall
 Have God to be his guide.

THE PILGRIM: HIS CHARACTER

I am content with what I have,
Little be it, or much;
And, Lord, contentment still I crave,
Because Thou savest such.

Fullness to such a burden is
That go on pilgrimage:
Here little, and hereafter bliss,
Is best from age to age.

JOHN BUNYAN

ON HIS BLINDNESS

When I consider how my light is spent
Ere half my days, in this dark world and wide,
And that one talent which is death to hide,
Lodged with me useless, though my soul more bent
To serve therewith my Maker, and present
My true account, lest He, returning, chide,— “Doth God exact day-labour, light denied?”
I fondly ask. But Patience, to prevent
That murmur, soon replies, “God doth not need
Either man’s work, or His own gifts: who best
Bear His mild yoke, they serve Him best: His state
Is kingly: thousands at His bidding speed
And post o’er land and ocean without rest:
They also serve who only stand and wait.”

JOHN MILTON

A CONSECRATION

Not of the princes and prelates with periwigged charioteers

Riding triumphantly laurelled to lap the fat of the years,—

Rather the scorned—the rejected—the men hemmed in with the spears;

The men of the tattered battalion which fights till it dies,

Dazed with the dust of the battle, the din and the cries,
The men with the broken heads and the blood running into their eyes.

Not the be-medalled Commander, beloved of the throne,
Riding cock-horse to parade when the bugles are blown,
But the lads who carried the koppie and cannot be known.

Not the ruler for me, but the ranker, the tramp of the road,

The slave with the sack on his shoulders pricked on with the goad,

The man with too weighty a burden, too weary a load.

The sailor, the stoker of steamers, the man with the clout,

The chantyman bent at the halliards putting a tune to the shout,

The drowsy man at the wheel and the tired look-out.

THE PILGRIM: HIS CHARACTER

Others may sing of the wine and the wealth and the mirth,
The portly presence of potentates goodly in girth;—
Mine be the dirt and the dross, the dust and scum of the earth!

Theirs be the music, the colour, the glory, the gold;
Mine be a handful of ashes, a mouthful of mould.
Of the maimed, of the halt and the blind in the rain and the cold—

Of these shall my songs be fashioned, my tale be told
Amen.

JOHN MASEFIELD

THE SEEKERS

Friends and loves we have none, nor wealth nor blessed
abode,
But the hope of the City of God at the other end of the road.

Not for us are content, and quiet and peace of mind,
For we go seeking a city that we shall never find.

There is no solace on earth for us—for such as we—
Who search for a hidden city that we shall never see.

Only the road and the dawn, the sun, the wind, and the rain,
And the watch fire under stars, and sleep, and the road again.

We seek the City of God, and the haunt where beauty dwells,
And we find the noisy mart and the sound of burial bells.

Never the golden city, where radiant people meet,
But the dolorous town where mourners are going about the street.

We travel the dusty road, till the light of the day is dim,
And sunset shows us spires away on the world's rim.

We travel from dawn to dusk, till the day is past and by,
Seeking the Holy City beyond the rim of the sky.

Friends and loves we have none, nor wealth nor blessed
abode,
But the hope of the City of God at the other end of the road.

JOHN MASEFIELD

I LOVE ALL BEAUTEOUS THINGS

I love all beauteous things,
I seek and adore them;
God hath no better praise,
And man in his hasty days
Is honoured for them.

THE PILGRIM: HIS CHARACTER

I too will something make
And joy in the making;
Altho' to-morrow it seem
Like the empty words of a dream
Remembered on waking.

ROBERT BRIDGES

THE PILGRIM: HIS LOVE OF COUNTRY

THE SOUTH COUNTRY

When I am living in the Midlands,
That are sodden and unkind,
I light my lamp in the evening:
My work is left behind;
And the great hills of the South Country
Come back into my mind.

The great hills of the South Country
They stand along the sea,
And it's there, walking in the high woods,
That I could wish to be,
And the men that were boys when I was a boy
Walking along with me.

The men that live in North England
I saw them for a day:
Their hearts are set upon the waste fells,
Their skies are fast and grey
From their castle-walls a man may see
The mountains far away

THE PILGRIM: HIS LOVE OF COUNTRY

The men that live in West England
They see the Severn strong,
A-rolling on rough water brown
Light aspen leaves along.
They have the secret of the Rocks
And the oldest kind of song.

But the men that live in the South Country
Are the kindest and most wise,
They get their laughter from the loud surf,
And the faith in their happy eyes
Comes surely from our Sister the Spring
When over the sea she flies;
The violets suddenly bloom at her feet,
She blesses us with surprise.

I never get between the pines
But I smell the Sussex air;
Nor I never come on a belt of sand
But my home is there.
And along the sky the line of the Downs
So noble and so bare.

A lost thing could I never find,
Nor a broken thing mend:
And I fear I shall be all alone
When I get towards the end.
Who will there be to comfort me
Or who will be my friend?

I will gather and carefully make my friends
Of the men of the Sussex Weald;

HILAIRE BELLOC

They watch the stars from silent folds,
They stiffly plough the field.
By them and the God of the South Country
My poor soul shall be healed.

If I ever become a rich man,
Or if ever I grow to be old,
I will build a house with deep thatch
To shelter me from the cold,
And there shall the Sussex songs be sung
And the story of Sussex told.

I will hold my house in the high wood,
Within a walk of the sea,
And the men that were boys when I was a boy
Shall sit and drink with me.

HILAIRE BELLOC

THE NEW JERUSALEM

And did those feet in ancient time
Walk upon England's mountains green?
And was the holy Lamb of God
On England's pleasant pastures seen?

And did the Countenance Divine
Shine forth upon our clouded hills?
And was Jerusalem builded here
Among these dark Satanic mills?

THE PILGRIM: HIS LOVE OF COUNTRY

Bring me my bow of burning gold!

Bring me my arrows of desire!

Bring me my spear! O clouds, unfold!

Bring me my chariot of fire!

I will not cease from mental fight,

Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand,

Till we have built Jerusalem

In England's green and pleasant land.

III

Up goes the lark, as if all were jolly!
 Over the duck-pond the willow shakes.
 Easy to think that grieving's folly,
 When the hand's firm as driven stakes!
 Ay, when we're strong, and braced, and manful,
 Life's a sweet fiddle: but we're a batch
 Born to become the Great Juggler's han'ful:
 Balls he shies up, and is safe to catch.

IV

Here's where the lads of the village cricket:
 I was a lad not wide from here:
 Couldn't I whip off the bail from the wicket?
 Like an old world those days appear!
 Donkey, sheep, geese, and thatched ale-house—
 I know them!
 They are old friends of my halts, and seem,
 Somehow, as if kind thanks I owe them:
 Juggling don't hinder the heart's esteem.

V

Juggling's no sin, for we must have victual:
 Nature allows us to bait for the fool.
 Holding one's own makes us juggle no little;
 But, to increase it, hard juggling's the rule.
 You that are sneering at my profession,
 Haven't you juggled a vast amount?
 There's the Prime Minister, in one Session,
 Juggles more games than my sins'll count.

It's past parsons to console us:

No, nor no doctor fetch for me:

Finery while his poor helpmate grubs:

Coin I've stored, and you won't be wanting:

You shan't beg from the troughs and tubs.

Nobly you've stuck to me, though in his kitchen

Many a Marquis would hail you Cook!

Palaces you could have ruled and grown rich in,

But your old Jerry you never forsook.

XI

Hand up the chirper! ripe ale winks in it;

Let's have comfort and be at peace.

Once a stout draught made me light as a linnet.

Cheer up! the Lord must have his lease.

Maybe—for none see in that black hollow—

It's just a place where we're held in pawn,

And, when the Great Juggler makes as to swallow

It's just the sword-trick—I ain't quite gone!

Yonder came smells of the gorse, so nutty,
 Gold-like and warm: it's the prime of May.
 Better than mortar, brick and putty
 Is God's house on a blowing day.
 Lean me more up the mound; now I feel it:
 All the old heath-smells! Ain't it strange?
 There's the world laughing, as if to conceal it,
 But He's by us, juggling the change.

ALL THAT'S PAST

Very old are the woods;
 And the buds that break
 Out of the briar's boughs,
 When March winds wake,

So old with their beauty are—
 Oh, no man knows
 Through what wild centuries
 Roves back the rose.

Very old are the brooks;
 And the rills that rise
 Where snow sleeps cold beneath
 The azure skies
 Sing such a history
 Of come and gone,
 Their every drop is as wise
 As Solomon.

Very old are we men;
 Our dreams are tales
 Told in dim Eden
 By Eve's nightingales;
 We wake and whisper awhile,
 But, the day gone by,
 Silence and sleep like fields

OZYMANDIAS

I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shatter'd visage lies, whose frown,
And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamp'd on these lifeless things,
The hand that mock'd them and the heart that fed;
And on the pedestal these words appear:

" My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair! "
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away.

THE LADY OF SHALOTT

PART I

On either side the river lie
Long fields of barley and of rye,
That clothe the wold and meet the sky;
And thro' the field the road runs by
 To many-tower'd Camelot;
And up and down the people go,
Gazing where the lilies blow,
Round an island there below,
 The island of Shalott.

Willows whiten, aspens quiver,
Little breezes dusk and shiver
Thro' the wave that runs for ever
By the island in the river
 Flowing down to Camelot.
Four grey walls, and four grey towers,
Overlook a space of flowers,
And the silent isle imbowers
 The Lady of Shalott.

By the margin, willow-veil'd,
Slide the heavy barges trail'd
By slow horses; and unhail'd
The shallop flitteth silken-sail'd
 Skimming down to Camelot:
But who hath seen her wave her hand?
Or at the casement seen her stand?
Or is she known in all the land,
 The Lady of Shalott?

FAREWELL

Only reapers, reaping early
In among the bearded barley,
Hear a song that echoes cheerly
From the river winding clearly,
 Down to tower'd Camelot:
And by the moon the reaper weary,
Piling sheaves in uplands airy,
Listening, whispers, "'Tis the fairy Lady of Shalott."

PART II

There she weaves by night and day
A magic web with colours gay,
She has heard a whisper say,
A curse is on her if she stay
 To look down to Camelot
She knows not what the curse may be,
And so she weaveth steadily,
And little other care hath she,
 The Lady of Shalott.

And moving thro' a mirror clear
That hangs before her all the year,
Shadows of the world appear.
There she sees the highway near
 Winding down to Camelot:
There the river eddy whirls,
And there the surly village-churls,
And the red cloaks of market girls,
 Pass onward from Shalott.

LORD TENNYSON

Sometimes a troop of damsels glad,
An abbot on an ambling pad,
Sometimes a curly shepherd-lad,
Or long-hair'd page in crimson clad,
Goes by to tower'd Camelot;
And sometimes thro' the mirror blue
The knights come riding two and two:
She hath no loyal knight and true,
The Lady of Shalott.

But in her web she still delights
To weave the mirror's magic sights,
For often thro' the silent nights
A funeral, with plumes and lights
And music, went to Camelot;
Or when the moon was overhead,
Came two young lovers lately wed;
"I am half sick of shadows," said
The Lady of Shalott.

PART III

A bow-shot from her bower-eaves,
He rode between the barley-sheaves,
The sun came dazzling thro' the leaves:
And flamed upon the brazen greaves
Of bold Sir Lancelot.
A red-cross knight for ever kneel'd
To a lady in his shield,
That sparkled on the yellow field,
Beside remote Shalott.

The gemmy bridle glitter'd free,
 Like to some branch of stars we see
 Hung in the golden Galaxy.
 The bridle bells rang merrily

As he rode down to Camelot:
 And from his blazon'd baldrick slung
 A mighty silver bugle hung,
 And as he rode his armour rung,
 Beside remote Shalott.

All in the blue unclouded weather
 Thick-jewell'd shone the saddle leather,
 The helmet and the helmet-feather
 Burn'd like one burning flame together,

As he rode down to Camelot.
 As often thro' the purple night,
 Below the starry clusters bright,
 Some bearded meteor, trailing light,
 Moves over still Shalott.

His broad clear brow in sunlight glow'd;
 On burnish'd hooves his war-horse trode;
 From underneath his helmet flow'd
 His coal-black curls as on he rode,

As he rode down to Camelot.
 From the bank and from the river
 He flash'd into the crystal mirror,
 "Tirra lirra," by the river
 Sang Sir Lancelot.

She left the web, she left the loom,
 She made three paces thro' the room,

LORD TENNYSON

She saw the water-lily bloom,
She saw the helmet and the plume,
She look'd down to Camelot.
Out flew the web and floated wide;
The mirror crack'd from side to side;
"The curse is come upon me," cried
The Lady of Shalott.

PART IV

In the stormy east-wind straining,
The pale yellow woods were waning,
The broad stream in his banks complaining,
Heavily the low sky raining
Over tower'd Camelot;
Down she came and found a boat
Beneath a willow left afloat,
And round about the prow she wrote
The Lady of Shalott.

And down the river's dim expanse
Like some bold seer in a trance,
Seeking all his own mischance—
With a glassy countenance
Did she look to Camelot.
And at the closing of the day
She loos'd the chain, and down she lay;
The broad stream bore her far away,
The Lady of Shalott.

Lying, robed in snowy white
That loosely flew to left and right—

The leaves upon her falling light—
Thro' the noises of the night

She floated down to Camelot:
And as the boat-head wound along
The willowy hills and fields among,
They heard her singing her last song,
The Lady of Shalott.

Heard a carol, mournful, holy,
Chanted loudly, chanted lowly,
Till her blood was frozen slowly,
And her eyes were darkened wholly,
Turn'd to tower'd Camelot;
For ere she reach'd upon the tide
The first house by the water-side,
Singing in her song she died,
The Lady of Shalott.

Under tower and balcony,
By garden-wall and gallery,
A gleaming shape she floated by,
Dead-pale between the houses high,
Silent into Camelot.
Out upon the wharfs they came,
Knight and burgher, lord and dame,
And round the prow they read her name,
The Lady of Shalott.

Who is this? and what is here?
And in the lighted palace near
Died the sound of royal cheer;
And they cross'd themselves for fear,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

All the knights at Camelot:
But Lancelot mused a little space;
He said, "She has a lovely face;
God in His mercy lend her grace,
The Lady of Shalott."

LORD TENNYSON

THE BURIAL SONG FROM "CYMBELINE"

Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages;
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke:
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Fear not slander, censure rash;
Thou hast finished joy and moan:
All lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

FAREWELL

No exorciser harm thee!
Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Nothing ill come near thee!
Quiet consummation have;
And renownèd be thy grave!

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

SILENCE

There is a silence where hath been no sound,
There is a silence where no sound may be,
In the cold grave—under the deep, deep sea,
Or in wide desert where no life is found,
Which hath been mute, and still must sleep profound
No voice is hushed—no life treads silently,
But clouds and cloudy shadows wander free,
That never spoke, over the idle ground:
But in green ruins, in the desolate walls
Of antique palaces where Man hath been,
Though the dun fox or wild hyena calls,
And owls, that flit continually between,
Shriek to the echo, and the low winds moan—
There the true Silence is, self-conscious and alone.
